Gangsters Shoot Chinch Bugs Chew Automobiles Boom And, the Pleiades

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1935, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.

Chicago, March 25—Regular Chicago weather, bracing air from the lake, smoke in the air, most welcome, proving that some factory chimneys are active.

News here deals with an unsuccessful effort by gunmen to murder T. J. Courtney, state attorney, who has annoyed criminals by going after them.

At 2:30 in the morning the state's attorney was going home in his auto, with Alderman Perry beside him in the back seat, his bodyguard, two detectives, one driving, in the front seat. A fast small car pulled up, fired eight bullets, making holes in Courtney's automobile, hitting nobody.

Two bullets passed close to Courtney's head.

Courtney says of those that tried to murder him "they were punks," which means that they were second-grade criminals, and he promises to put "the heat to them."

Courtney has seriously disturbed racketeering in one labor union in Chicago and says those who tried to murder him were "labor racketeers, a cheap, chiselling mob." He thinks he knows who they are and at the moment he is looking for "the man in the green gabardine coat." There's a good title for a detective story.

It will interest Henry Ford to know that the small car used by the gunmen, according to Courtney, "got away so fast, it was out of range of our pistols before we could start shooting. If I had had a rifle I might have got somebody."

Better, more important news is contributed by a young friend, John A. Dickson, who looks after "foreign advertising" for the Herald-Examiner.

He thinks you would like to know that "last week the automobile industry turned out one hundred thousand and sixty-five cars, the first time automobile production has gone above 100,000 units since 1930."

That, as Mr. Dickson says, is really important news. It means that one hundred thousand and sixty-five families and business men have been made happy in the possession of beautiful new cars and new, marvelously efficient trucks.

It proves also that among American business men the automobile industry, refusing to be discouraged, has kept up its courage and its advertising, constantly producing better cars to make advertising productive.

It pays to work hard, to have courage, produce what people want and then to let them know you have it.

Farmers are warned by the government to look for an invasion of chinch bugs that eat wheat, oats, barley, rye, corn. They will not eat tomato plants or soy beans; nobody knows why.

Barnum said he did not know why his white elephant would drink anything else and would not drink English coffee. He could only guess that the elephant did not like English coffee.

The chinch bug is already stirring underground, in 70 counties of Illinois, and farmers are advised to pray for rain, which drowns the bugs. Perhaps the little creatures have heard from Washington and seek to "do their part" by cutting down crops, and saving the farmers the trouble of plowing under.

Young people that have read Tennyson's description of the Pleiades, "fire flies tangled in a silver braid," may be interested in some real news about the Pleiades. Every speck of light in that interesting group is a separate sun, and Professor Jan Schilt of Columbia University proves that each speck, a separate sun, moves in its own independent orbit.

When your narrator visited the able French astronomer Flammarion, shortly before his death, climbing six flights of stairs on the other side of the Seine in Paris to find him, Flammarion said that in all astronomy nothing was more interesting than the study of the Pleiades.

"We have counted 40,000 suns in that small Pleiades group, thus far, and we are only on the threshhold of astronomical knowledge."

Flammarion did not live to hear of that giant telescope lens, 200 inches in diameter, now cooling off at the Corning Glass works, destined to take the sight and mind of man nine hundred million light years into space, revealing endless "new universes."

Once more tell your high school child to figure out how many miles there are in "nine hundred million light years."

Figure how many seconds there are in a year, multiply that number by one hundred and eighty-six thousand, multiply the result by nine hundred million, and you have the total number of miles.

HULTMAN Ouster CHARGES

HIT REIGN AS POLICE HEAD

From liquor and automobiles to fertilizer, former Police Commissioner Hultman diverted city property to his own use, 20 specifications urging his removal as an office holder charged today.

The last Christmas holidays saw 39 quarts of whiskey and 31 of champagne transported to his home in police cars, it is alleged.

Hultman, while police commissioner, also juggled bids for police cars and uniforms, according to the allegations, and allowed vice to flourish in the city.

The charges are contained in specifications in connection with Governor Curley's ouster proceedings against Hultman as chairman of the Metropolitan District Commission.

The specifications were drawn up by John P. Feeney, personal counsel for the Governor, and were laid in Hultman's lap today.

May Be More

Hearing on the charges is scheduled for a week from tomorrow.

In the specifications, Hultman is charged with "unfitness, malfeasance, misfeasance and nonfeasance," both in the offices of police commissioner and in his present chairmanship.

The specifications constitute a lengthy document, but an indication that there may be even more charges introduced at the hearing is included.

This is in the final paragraph, which states:

"His Excellency, the Governor, reserves the right to permit such other evidence as is competent

'Serve 4700 Warrants,' King Order

More than 4700 unserved warrants, charging a wide variety of crime and dating back to 1893, were revealed in dusty police files today.

In a sharp rebuke to all police captains, Superintendent Martin H. King demanded that action be taken at once to clean up the unserved warrants, and that he be kept in touch with the progress being made.

The matter was brought to King's attention by Captain James Sheehan, commanding officer of the bureau of records, who has just completed a survey.

In a tour of all stations and investigation of all files, Sheehan found the 4700 warrants many of which, he says, have no notations on them to show whether an attempt was ever made to serve them.

Describing the condition as "shocking and amazing," Superintendent King issued an order to all captains which was read at rollcall today.

The order concluded:

"After a reasonable length of time I want a report in detail from all commanding officers on the progress being made."

The order caused a furor in all stations and special officers immediately were dispatched to headquarters for additional orders.

While many of the warrants are for minor offenses, a hasty investigation showed such charges as murder, assault and battery, armed robbery and other serious crimes.

Police Blood Given Girl

7 Volunteer in Life or Death Transfusion

In an attempt to save the life of a brother police officer's little daughter, Patrolman George Burke of Station 2 underwent a blood transfusion at Baker Memorial Hospital today.

The child is Ann McNeil, daughter of Patrolman and Mrs. Francis McNeil of 166 Brown street, Roslindale.

Burke and six other Boston patrolmen volunteered their blood. The other six are subject to call, for the condition of the girl is poor.

She was operated on for tumor of the brain by Dr. John Hodgson, brain specialist.

Burke was held at the hospital for a short time to recover from loss of blood.

Berlin, March 26—Military equality with the rest of Europe and disarmament only if all other nations disarm.

This was the formal notification served upon Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon of Great Britain by Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany today as Anglo-German negotiations ended at 5:30 p. m. after two days of discussion.

It was officially stated that Hitler had not given a definite opinion of how large a military force he intends to build.

He parried all questions on this subject and in effect turned back the whole arms problem to the former allies of world war days.

"We will await such proposals from other powers rather than make them ourselves," he said, it was officially announced.

Despite an expressed willingness to return to the League of Nations, such a consideration, Hitler insist-

SILVER Bloc Loses on WORKS BILL

By Associated Press

Washington, March 26—Silver forces today lost another step in their attempt to force House acceptance of the Thomas silver inflation amendment to the $4,880,000,000 work relief bill.

Following party leaders, the House voted down an attempt by the silver bloc to change the special resolution which would reject all amendments and send the measure to conference with the Senate.

Silverites wanted to accept all other Senate changes, along with the Thomas amendment, and send the bill to the White House.

Hitler Stands Pat on Army

ALL GERMANY ENRAGED

ed, must be preceded by clearance of existing obstacles.

"No Naval Race"

Acceptance of the Franco-British "aerial Locarno" does not present serious complications, it was state, and this was apparently the only concrete accomplishment of the talks plus a tacit understanding that no naval race be undertaken.

It was revealed that Hitler proposed a non-aggression pact for Austria.

Yet he refused to enter any agreement that would mean perpetuation of the present rule in Austria.

All in all Hitler's attitude was, in effect, a reaffirmation of the Nazi equality platform he has demanded since his rise to power.

He stood rockbound on an "eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" basis, and made clear he would not budge an inch on Germany's present armaments status unless the other nations of Europe meet him half way.

This is the message Sir John Simon will take to Stresa, Italy, on April 11, when he is to meet with the representatives of France and Italy for a second tri-partite parley before the League of Nations council assembles on France's demand to "try" the Reich for alleged violation of the Versailles treaty.

Sir John will return to London tomorrow to report to the British cabinet.

British sources said he made it clear Britain would have to oppose Germany unless Hitler consents to join in collective efforts to keep the peace.

Hits at Neighbors

Hitler repeatedly avoided specific figures, basing Germany's security needs upon the strength of her neighbors, and particularly stressed her naval requirements to protect the Baltic against Soviet sea invasion.

He insisted the proposed Eastern Locarno and Danubian pacts were unsuited to maintenance of European stability, saying they would make a vassal, rather than an independent state of Austria.

He pointed out that Germany can sign no pact that might interfere with the Reich's future relations with Austria and possibly provide an excuse for neighbor powers to interfere with domestic Austrian affairs.

All Germany Angry at Nazi Death Decrees

Berlin, March 26—Sentencing of four Nazis to death in Lithuania today resulted in a tense atmosphere in Germany.

Lithuania's action has shocked the Reich and was a veritable bombshell hurled into the Hitler and Simon parley.

The death sentences clearly show "both trial and verdict were dictated by political motives," a spokesman for an enraged Germany declared.

"The verdict," he continued, "will only evoke justice over Lithuanian justice. It can only be hoped the powers signatory to the Memel statue will step in and see that justice is done."

It was understood news of the verdict reached Chancellor Hitler in the midst of his presentation of Germany's armaments argument to Simon.

He promptly broke off his argument and spoke at length to the British visitors regarding the Memel problem.

The death sentences were generally regarded as a "slap in the face" for signatories of the Memel statute, England, France, Italy and Japan.

The German press declared the sentences showed why the Reich cannot join the proposed Eastern Locarno Pact without adequate guarantees.

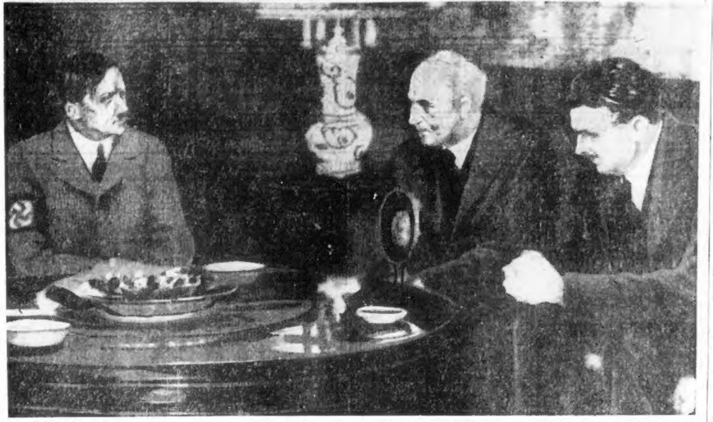
"The Lithuanian pigmy is determined to antagonize the sleeping German giant," a spokesman in influential quarters said.

COMMONER
Seen Canada Chief

London, March 26 (AP)—Colonel John Buchan, who would be the first commoner ever appointed to the post, will probably be the new Governor-General of Canada, it was stated authoritatively today.

The post, now occupied by Lord Bessborough, who is to retire shortly, is one of several important British overseas' offices which fall vacant during the current jubilee year.

FIRST RADIO PHOTO OF BERLIN CONFERENCE



ADOLF HITLER SIR JOHN SIMON CAPTAIN EDEN

By telephoto and radio from Berlin comes this "spot news" photograph of the Hitler-Simon conference, concluded today. Results, as yet undisclosed, may affect the fate of war-menaced Europe. Seated at table, with a lack of formality more in keeping with the atmosphere of a private club than with that of a dictator's headquarters, Adolf Hitler, Der Fuehrer of the Third Reich, and Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, discuss international events which have kept the capitals of the world in a flutter since a re-armed Germany refused further submission to the Versailles treaty. At Simon's elbow, is Captain Anthony Eden, Lord Privy Seal of England. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

70 SEIZED
In Dublin Raids

Dublin, Irish Free State, March 26 (AP)—About 70 Republican Party members were placed under arrest today as police made a series of raids believed to be a sequel to the shootings of last Saturday night, in which two policemen were wounded.

Among those taken were Peter O'Donnell, author, and Donal O'Donoghue, editor.

SUNDAY HOCKEY
Bill Signed

Governor Curley today signed the bill legalizing indoor Sunday hockey games. Sunday games may be played and participated in between 3 and 7 p. m.

FRANCE
Ratifies Pact WITH ITALY

Paris, March 26—The Franco-Italian accord reached at Rome was unanimously ratified by the French Senate today.

France and her allies "can always answer force with more force," Henry De Jouvenel, former French ambassador to Italy, told the Senate, speaking for ratification.

De Jouvenel praised Foreign Minister Laval's policy of mutual assistance pacts. He said the question of Austrian independence was the most important to face Europe since that of Belgium.

ERA FAVORITISM
Hit by Roche

Discrimination against single men and women in selections for ERA positions was protested today by Mayor James A. Roche of Everett in letters to Senators Walsh and Coolidge and Congressman Healey.

He charged social workers, fresh out of college, were being employed at $38 a week without the necessary background to make them of any worth.

N. H. Beano O. K.'d

Concord, N. H., March 26 (AP)—A lottery bill, which would legalize the game in which numbered cards and beans are used, was passed today by the House of Representatives. It now goes to the Senate.

LITHUANIA
Dooms Four NAZIS TO DIE

By International News Service

Memel, Lithuania, March 26—Climaxing a treason trial that may have a profound effect upon the precarious situation in Europe, four prominent Lithuanian Nazi leaders were sentenced to death today.

They were among 125 accused of murdering a fellow-Nazi named Jesuttis, whom they suspected of betraying their alleged plot to overthrow the Lithuanian regime in Memel and establish a Nazi dictatorship.

Heavy sentences were meted out to most of the remaining 121. Two were sentenced to life imprisonment and others to terms ranging from eight to twelve years.

Thirty-five of the defendants were released. The property of all those convicted was ordered confiscated.

Those sentenced to die are Emil Boll, Walter Priess, Heinrich Wannagat and Emil Lips. They were convicted as the actual slayers.

Herr Dressler, former president of the Memel Chamber, received an eight-year sentence. Nine defendants were sentenced to terms of nine years each.

Dr. Ernest Neumann, leader of the Socialist People's Union, and members of his group received 12-year terms. Members of the Christian Socialist faction were sentenced to eight years.

Memel, tiny strip between East Prussia and Lithuania, was taken away from Germany following the war and is now supposed to be autonomous. The population is German in culture and habits and the peace treaty provided certain safeguards for the Germans.

6 ARMY AIR
Bases Approved in DEFENSE BILL

By Associated Press

Washington, March 26—A measure to authorize construction of six more army air bases to guard the nation's frontiers was approved today by the full House military committee.

In addition, the measure would authorize supplementary bases in the interior and expansion of existing air corps stations and depots.

The bill directs the war department, in determining locations for new bases, to consider these areas: Alaska, Pacific Northwest, Rocky Mountains, Atlantic Northeast, the Southeastern states and the Atlantic Southeast and Caribbean.

Committee members explained other areas were adequately provided with air fields.

The measure is sponsored by Representative Wilcox (D.), Florida, who said a special rule under which the bill might be taken up in the House would be sought immediately.

Vetoes Revere Bill

Governor Curley today vetoed his first bill.

It would have enlarged the membership of the Revere board of public health from three to five members.

The Governor declared the bill would create added expense for the city and start similar petitions from other communities.

POEM
COLLINS WROTE BEFORE CRASH

By Associated Press

New York, March 26—The New York Post today printed what it termed the testament of Jimmy Collins—a poem in prose entitled "I Am Dead," written six months ago by the noted test pilot killed last Friday.

The "Testament" is a dramatic fantasy, a prediction that came true. Collins happened to write in this way:

Before testing a plane in Buffalo last October, a columnist on the Post, a personal friend of the darin aviator, asked him to write a "guest column" describing the test flight.

This, in part, is what Collins wrote:

"I am dead.

"It is by the written word that I can say to you, 'I am dead.'"

The author then goes on to say that flying had been a symbol of a vague dream to him, that he had a "passion" for it which could not be denied.

"Finally," Collins wrote, "there came a time when I would rather eat than fly, and money was a precious thing. Yes, money was a precious thing, and they offered me money, and there was still a small glow of the deep, strong dream.

"The ship was beautiful. Its silver wings glistened in the sun. Its motor was a strong song but lifted it to high heights. And then . . . down. Down out of the blue heights we hurtled. Straight down. Faster. Faster and faster, testing our strength by diving. (Collins was killed in a power dive).

"Fear? Yes, I had grown older. But grim fear now. The fear of daring and courage. But tempered, too, with some of the strong power of the old dream now. Down. Down.

"A roar of flashing steel and a streak of glinting . . . Oh, yes. Oh, yes, now . . . Breaking wings. Too frail . . . The wings . . . the dream . . . The evil days.

"The cold but vibrant fuselage was the last thing to feel my warm and living flesh. The long, loud diving roar of the motor, rising to the awful crashing crescendo of its impact with the earth, was my death song.

"I am dead now."

JAPAN
Tomorrow Night QUITS LEAGUE

By Associated Press

Geneva, March 26—Japan's existence as a world power and especially her preponderant position in Eastern Asia cannot be ignored by the League of Nations, Matsayuki Yokoyama, Japanese consul general at Geneva, said today.

His statement, authorized by the Tokio government, was made in connection with Japan's resignation from the League, which becomes effective tomorrow at midnight.

"Japan for her part," Yokoyama added, "cannot ignore the League as a most important international organization and especially its usefulness as a central organ for humanitarian and technical work."

The consul general recalled the imperial rescript issued two years ago when Japan gave notice of her withdrawal from the Geneva organization in which she emphasized her intention of continuing to contribute to the promotion of international peace.

He said the Far Eastern empire would still collaborate with the League in every possible way.

BELGIUM
To Devalue, May QUIT GOLD

Brussels, March 26—Paul Van Zeeland, Belgium's new premier, is almost certain to herald devaluation of the belga in announcing the program of his government in Parliament tomorrow night, informed circles said today.

Parliament is expected to go into session the following day to repeal the stabilization law of 1926

Pending definite action, a decree intended to halt the decline of the belga restricts the amount of currency Belgian travelers may take out of the country to the equivalent of $50.

Border guards have been strengthened as a precaution against smuggling currency.

ERA Man Jailed

Peter Palermo of Lexington, part time ERA worker, was sentenced in Concord court today to one year in the house of correction for breaking and entering and was held for the grand jury on two other counts.

FATE
Hangs on 4 LIVES
LITHUANIA BIG HITLER ISSUE

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

(World Copyright, 1935, by International News Service. Reproduction in whole or part strictly prohibited.)

London, March 26—Lithuania tossed its own bombshell today on the conference table between Reichsfuehrer Hitler and British Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon.

Suddenly the lives of four Memel Nazis condemned to death by court-martial at Kovno have become a matter of primary significance in the conversations which Sir John is desperately trying to direct towards salvation of those millions of lives which a new war would cost.

Today Hitler and Simon, with the fate of Europe in their hands, turned their attention from those nameless millions to these four obscure individuals.

Why?

Memel is Europe's No. 1 war risk today; first, because its citizens are German, but its government is Lithuanian.

The Germans hate and look down upon the Lithuanians and call them "long-haired Asiatics" and call their state a "puppy dog dwarf."

The Lithuanians hate and fear the Germans, call them "arrogant barbarians" and "bald-shaved brutes."

Second, Germany's avowed aim is to unite all Germans in Europe under the third Reich.

Can Chain Hold?

Memel is the one point where German pressure can be brought to bear with the least risk, and today the Kovno verdicts released the whole enormous weight of Germany's propaganda machine, backed by 66,000,000 people and 36 army divisions, to press upon this one frail link in what the Germans used to call "the chains of Versailles."

Will it hold?

The question is of first importance in Europe because, while Germany has denounced the military clauses of the Versailles treaty, she so far has left the territorial clauses untouched.

Should Memel be surrendered, then the Allied view is that the whole fabric of the Versailles boundaries would be dissolved.

Against this pressure Lithuania has 2,400,000 population and an army a fracton larger than Germany has stationed regularly in East Prussia alone.

She looks for allies in England, France, Italy and Japan, who jointly guaranteed the autonomy of Memel, but she is skeptical of help from them.

Involves Soviet

She knows the Soviet Union has the greatest interest in keeping the Germans out of Memel, but the Soviet Union is separated from her by Poland.

After Hitler came the Lithuanians bore down hard on the Germans and in 1933 arrested for treason 126 Nazis, whose trial has just ended.

Lithuanians openly deposed local German officials and in contravention of the Memel statute of autonomy, governed the district by the same "authoritative" methods which the Lithuanians as a whole had adopted in 1926 and which Germany approved for itself under Hitler, but strongly disapproved for Memel under Lithuanians.

Into this witches' kettle of mutual hatreds, Kovno today tossed its own verdict by finding 91 Nazis guilty of plotting to return Memel to Germany and sentencing four to die.

This is the mess Simon is called upon today to straighten out. It explains one reason why Hitler won't enter an eastern pack to guarantee, among others, the Lithuanian frontier.

It also helps to understand why Europe "cannot keep the peace."

Red-Head in

HAIRDRESSERS HAND DOWN DICTATE

By Universal Service

New York, March 26—Platinum blondes are out! It's the red-head's turn from now on.

This was the first dictate handed down by 5000 hairdressers, gathered from all over the United States for the official show and convention sponsored by the New York State Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association.

Venetian red tops the list, according to P. Richard, master of ceremonies on the opening day.

Next in favor, he said, comes auburn and reddish-blonde. The various dyes, often harmful, needed for platinum locks have "killed" that vogue, he explained.

Out of the cutting and styling contests held each evening during the four days of the convention will evolve the perfect 1935 coiffure.

Richard, however, pointed out that fashion has already pointed the way toward the tailored coiffure in the day time.

"And in the evening, women can be as feminine as they wish. Transformation pieces and curls will come in strong.

"But in the daytime, hair must be scupptured. It will be shorter, too."

He said that the greatest influence on women's hair styles last year was Katharine Hepburn and her "fringe."

This opinion was echoed by Carolyn Van Wyck, motion picture magazine writer, who said the three greatest hairdressing trends may be traced to Greta Garbo's long bob, Norma Shearer's coronet, and Hepburn's bangs.

'Perfect' Girl to Wed

Once ranked by artists as having the "ideal American figure," Marie V. List, former Boston model, is planning a quiet marriage to Dr. Edward H. Kinder, Back Bay dentist, filing of wedding intentions in New York revealed today. It was in Dr. Kinder's Watertown home that Babe Ruth's first wife, Mrs. Helen Woodford Ruth, was accidentally burned to death in 1929.

MODEL To Become BRIDE

MARIE LIST IN SECRET PLANS

Boston's most celebrated model of a few years ago, the girl who was known from coast to coast as the ideally formed American girl, suddenly burst into the limelight today as a bride-to-be.

She is Miss Marie V. List, no longer a model only, but an artist and instructor in her own right as well.

Her fiance is Dr. Edward H. Kindler, Back Bay dentist, for whom the return to the spotlight was no less a transition from comparative quiet.

Dr Kinder came into the public eye in 1929 when he was attending a boxing show and Helen Woodford Ruth, first wife of "Babe" Ruth, was burned to death in the Kinder home in Quincy street, Watertown.

The couple were in New York today, where they had filed marriage intentions very quietly and in an attempt to make a deep secret out of the wedding

Miss List disclosed that she had been divorced from William A Heptig of Boston only a year ago and had resumed her maiden name.

Miss List, about ten years back, was the center of a court controversy that went on for weeks when she sued the Boston & Albany railroad for having been struck by an orange.

Miss List claimed $20,000 damages, because she said, her injuries prevented her from following her profession as a model.

LOVE Of 'Baby Doe' BARED

FADED TABOR LETTERS FOUND

Denver, March 26—The romance of Elizabeth "Baby Doe" Tabor, who died in poverty recently, and her millionaire husband, the late Senator H. A. W. Tabor, was retold today in the dim and faded penmanship of love letters found in a Denver warehouse.

The letters were uncovered in some of 17-iron bound trunks opened yesterday in the course of settling the estate of the one-time beauty. She died in a squalid mining shack near the Matchless Mine, which her husband had begged her never to relinquish.

One of Senator Tabor's letters to the girl he married in the presence [illegible] Arthur and his cabinet, began:

"My Darling, Darling Wife."

The letter assured her:

"You are near me even when I can't see you. Your love guides me in even the simplest transactions of life. The knowledge of your love for me enables me to carry the heaviest load, as I hope my love for you beautifies your existence."

In another Tabor spoke to his wife of various business details, but he closed with the avowal that if "I could see you for just a few moments—60 seconds, even—it would make my life more bearable."

Colorado's colorful "silver king" often was discouraged, the letters showed, but he retained a deep faith in his ultimate success, and added that "Love does make it worth while, doesn't it, darling?"

Some of Tabor's letters were written to his wife as she waited for him in their lavish Denver mansion while he worked at the Matchless.

Doctor Fells Holdup Man With Jonquils

A true lover of flowers is Dr. Walter G. Kendall of Atlantic. He loves to look at them, to smell their fragrance and to make them grow.

Despite his 80 years, the doctor planted some on his way home from annual banquet of the Boston Horticultural Club at the Parker House—planted them on the cranium of a would-be hold-up man.

"Hey you, buddy, give me that bundle," demanded a husky individual of the doctor as he walked along Milk street with a flower pot and several dozen jonquils under his arm.

"Sure, take it!" he replied—and let him have it with all the accumulated strength of his years.

1 HORSE,

2 Dog Tracks FAVORED

Massachusetts will probably have two dog racing tracks and one horse track this year, it was said at the State House today.

The dog tracks are expected to be in Revere and Dighton. The site for the horse track is problematic, with East Boston or Norwood out in front.

Action of the Revere city council early today practically assured a dog track on the site of old "Wonderland," across the tracks from Crescent Beach.

Meanwhile the racing commission was holding its closing hearing in the matter of suspension or revocation of dog grants to five organizations who had been licensed.

There's a Silver Lining In Black Blizzard Cloud

By Associated Press

Kansas City, March 26—One man's loss becomes another man's gain when the "black blizzards" sweep the plains states.

The loss—involving soil and crops—no one knows. Agricultural authorities are reluctant to place an estimate in dollars and cents on the losses suffered by farmers and stockmen as a result of the devastating dust storms which have ravaged sections of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado, Wyoming and Nebraska.

The best they can estimate is "millions."

The gain—recorded in increased soil fertility of neighboring states—no one can answer that either.

Of the agricultural experts polled today, A. R. Duncan, statistician of the Oklahoma board of agriculture, was the only one to venture a loss guess. He placed the figure at $10,000,000 for the state, but in addition to dust storm damage, he included drouth and winter freezes.

Duncan said wheat and oats crops in 10 western counties were "virtually destroyed."

"In that district there will not be more than enough wheat raised to furnish seed," he said.

He estimated other crops in the state at about 70 per cent of normal.

That is one state's loss.

Here is another's gain:

"Dust storms may be a nuisance to housewives, but they are a blessing to Missouri farmers," said W. A. Albrecht, professor of soils at the University of Missouri.

"The recent dust storm in this state did little or no damage and enriched the land with an average of probably 250 pounds to the acre of top soil blown from western Kansas and Colorado.

"The dust particles had been ground by wind action to 'silt size,' and are highly suitable for agricultural use.

"This dust averages 4600 pounds of nitrogen to every 2,000,000 pounds. The richest Missouri bottom soil does not have a higher nitrogen content."

Rains held Iowa's soil in place and according to Charles Reed, government meteorologist, it ought to produce more corn because of the "good earth" from the West that enriched the soil.

"Lots of Nebraska winter wheat is hopeless," said A. E. Anderson, "The wind dried out the top moisture and blew out the plants."

Doris Duke Scoffs at 'Wealthiest Girl' Title

By Associated Press

Agra, India, March 26—Mrs. James R. Cromwell, the former Doris Duke, indicated clearly today she has no relish for the title of "world's richest girl" or "tobacco queen."

Honeymooning here, the heiress to the Duke tobacco fortune said she was finding India "a very beautiful country and very interesting," despite the intense heat.

"Who said I am the richest girl in the world?" she inquired by way of doing a bit of interviewing on her own part.

Then she added with dignity:

"I am a married woman now."

"Tobacco queen! What a name!" she ejaculated in commenting on another of the titles popularly conferred on her from time to time.

The Cromwells, who came here to see the Taj Mahal, are going later to Calcutta, flying from there to Bangkok, Siam, on their way to the Far East.

The bride wears simple cotton dresses and eats plain food.

Switz Clears Woman

Suspect Free in Bail After Long Jail Term

Paris, March 26 (AP) — Mrs. Clara Levitan Bercowitz, on trial with 20 others in an alleged Soviet espionage plot, was released from prison on bail today after she was exonerated in testimony by Robert Gordon Switz, American, on trial in connection with the plot.

Benjamin Bercowitz, Rumanian, and the alleged leader of the band, also testified his wife had nothing to do with the plot. The prosecution recommended acquittal on the espionage charges and the 30-year-old woman was released pending trial on charges of using a false passport.

She has spent 15 months in prison along with most of the other 20 persons on trial, including Switz and his wife, of East Orange, N. J.

The court is expected to decide the case of Mrs. Bercowitz along with the Switzes at the end of the trial but the prosecution's recommendations usually are accepted.

Reno Divorce May Not Free Barbara, Lawyers Hint

Copyright, 1935, by International News Service

New York, March 26—After Princess Barbara Hutton Mdivani obtains her Reno divorce from her polo-playing husband—that may not be the end.

Possible legal complications were suggested today by leading divorce attorneys.

The beautiful heiress to the Woolworth fortune was married in Paris to Prince Alexis Mdivani. She was married twice in a civil ceremony and later in an elaborate ceremony in a cathedral in Paris.

France may not recognize a Nevada divorce.

Also—Reno divorces are not recognized in certain American States.

In other States, a Reno divorce is accepted with reservations, as not affecting property litigation.

Why did Barbara determine upon an American divorce rather than bringing her action in a French court?

Barbara and her father, Franklyn L. Hutton, at first decided the divorce action would be brought in Paris, and Barbara made her return trip to Europe recently with that purpose in mind, International News Service learned today.

But the plans were reversed at the last minute due to the attitude of the French courts in considering that a wife must be obedient to her husband's wishes.

Along these lines, it was recalled that a French court found in favor of Colonel Nelson Morris, Chicago packing house millionaire, in his divorce action against Jean Aubert, musical comedy actress—and she was French.

To make Princess Barbara's final decree valid in a number of American states Prince Alexis must appear in person or delegate power of attorney to his Reno lawyer to make appearance for him.

This procedure will protect the $40,000,000 fortune of Princess Mdivani against potential claims on her estate by any heirs of Prince Alexis.

LIST OF HULTMAN OUSTER CHARGES HIT HIS REIGN AS BOSTON POLICE HEAD

to be admitted during the hearing."

Following are the specifications delivered to Hultman today:

"In support of the proposed removal of Eugene C. Hultman from the office of district commissioner and Chairman of the special metropolitan water supply commission the following specifications of said Hultmann's unfitness, malfeasance, misfeasance and nonfeasance in the office of police commissioner of the City of Boston are made as showing that said Hultman conducted himself in said office in an unlawful and reprehensible manner and is an unfit person to hold the office of metropolitan district commission and chairman of the special metropolitan district water supply commission:

"1. While Police Commissioner of the City of Boston, said Hultman unlawfully procured one Superintendent Walley, superintendent of police buildings, to render private service to said Hultman during hours that said Walley was in the employ of and paid by the City of Boston; that in performing said private service for Hultman, Walley with said Hultman's knowledge and approval used an automobile which was the property of the City of Boston and used gasoline in said automobile paid for by the City of Boston; that such private service was so procured by said Hultman's order on an average of one day a week during a considerable period of time; wherefore he did wilfully and unlawfully abuse the authority of the office of Police Commissioner of the city of Boston.

"2. In November and December of 1934, said Hultman, while police commissioner of the city of Boston, did unlawfully appropriate to his own personal use 39 quarts of whiskey and 31 quarts of champagne which were in the custody of the police department; those 70 quarts were taken on approximately 15 different occasions and on order of said Hultman's were transported in police cars and delivered to said Hultman's residence, and there privately used by him; whereupon he did wilfully and unlawfully abuse the authority of the office of police commissioner of the city of Boston and made said office an instrument of corruption.

"3. In November and December of 1934, said Hultman, while police commissioner of the city of Boston, unlawfully withdrew or otherwise authorized the withdrawal from police headquarters of quantities of liquor without recording said withdrawals as required by the regulations of said police department. Wherefore he did wilfully and unlawfully abuse the authority of his office of police commissioner of the city of Boston and made it or permitted it to be made an instrument of corruption.

"Fostered Contempt"

"4—That in November and December of 1934, said Hultman while police commissioner of the city of Boston, unlawfully instructed divers employes of the police departmen to improperly remove from police headquarters quantities of liquor, and procured said employes to violate the regulations of the police department by requiring them to omit to make any record of said withdrawals; that in thus deliberately violating the laws in conjunction with subordinates he degraded the office of commissioner, encouraged demoralization, fostered insubordination and contempt of the department, wherefore he did wilfully and unlawfully abuse the authority of the office of police commissioner of the city of Boston.

"5—In 1935, while said Hultman was police commissioner he advertised for bids for supplying automobiles to the police department; bids to sell to the department 20 automobiles were filed by various bidders; that after the lowest bid was accepted by said Hultman as commissioner he procured said bidder to withdraw his bid, and thereupon awarded the contract to a higher bidder, not only for the 20 cars, but for 20 additional cars; that in said matter said Hultman did not act in good faith, nor for the best interests of the city of Boston, wherefore he did wilfully and unlawfully abuse the authority of the office of police commissioner of the city of Boston and made it an instrument of fraud.

"6—While said Hultman was police commissioner he awarded contracts for police uniforms to others than low bidders; said awards were not made in good faith nor for the best interest of the city of Boston, wherefore he did wilfully and unlawfully abuse the authority of the office of police commissioner of the city of Boston.

Fertilizer Cited

"7—While said Hultman was police commissioner of the city of Boston he did unlawfully appropriate to his own use quantities of fertilizer, the property of the city of Boston; said fertilizer was, upon said Hultman's order, transported from Boston to said Hultman's residence in Duxbury in automobiles belonging to the city of Boston, driven by chauffeurs in the employ of the city of Boston while employed by said city, wherefore he did wilfully and unlawfull abuse the authority of said office.

"8—While said Hultman was police commissioner of the city of Boston, he did unlawfully cause an automobile of the city of Boston to be used in his private service; while said automobile was thus being used, it was damaged as a result of a collision and said Hultman permitted the repairs of said automobile to be paid for and borne by the city of Boston, wherefore he did wilfully and unlawfully abuse the office of police commissioner of the city of Boston.

EUGENE C. HULTMAN
Ready to "take it"!

"9. While police commissioner of the city of Boston, said Hultman knowingly permitted his assistants and subordinates to abuse the authority of his office and nevertheless retained them in office with knowledge of their misconduct.

"10—While police commissioner of the city of Boston said Hultman knowingly permitted his assistants and subordinates to fail to discharge the duties of his office and nevertheless retained them in office with knowledge of their neglect of duty.

"11—While police commissioner of the city of Boston said Hultman was guilty of malfeasance, misfeasance, nonfeasance in his office in that he did either permit or promote the making of groundless charges against alleged operators of speakeasies, houses of ill-fame, gambling houses, or else having at hand or available by reasonable efforts evidence sufficient upon which to obtain injunctions, did, from improper motives, fail to proceed to obtain such injunctions, whereby he did wilfully abuse the authority of his office or did wilfully fail to discharge the duties thereof.

"Failed to Act"

"12—In divers cases, said Hultman while police commissioner of the city of Boston, having sufficient evidence in his possession or available by reasonable effort, from improper motives or because of neglect of duty, failed to prosecute or cause to be prosecuted by his assistants persons who were maintaining nuisances in violation of Chapter 139 of the General Laws.

"13. While said Hultman was police commissioner of the city of Boston, he received frequent reports of raids and investigations showing the existence in the city of Boston of divers disorderly houses, speakeasies, narcotic dens, and gambling houses; in many cases bills in equity to enjoin the further maintenance of the nuisances thus disclosed were drafted by said Hultman's legal assistant, one Schwartz; these bills in equity were signed and sworn to by said Hultman; in some cases, they were filed in court, but not prosecuted; in others, they were not filed in court; said Hultman was guilty of malfesance, misfeasance or nonfeasance in his office in that he either did permit or promote the making of groundless charges under oath or else having at hand evidence sufficient for the proper prosecution of said charges as provided by statute did wilfully or negligently fail to prosecute such proceedings, wherefore he did either wilfully abuse the authority of office or did wilfully fail to discharge the duties thereof."

"11. While police commissioner of the city of Boston said Hultman did unlawfully delegate the duty reposed in him of exercising judgment and discretion in the administration of his office to his legal assistant, whereby he, said Hultman, did wilfully fail to discharge the duties thereof.

"15—While said Hultman was police commissioner of the city of Boston he did wilfully or negligently fail to discharge the duties of said office in that he failed to exercise reasonable effort to determine that repeated violations of law were occurring in the Cosmos Club and Sportsmen's Club at 93 Broadway; that he wilfully closed his eyes to his duty, and upon learning that the charter of said Cosmos Club had been revoked by the secretary of state, knowingly permitted said charter to be renewed or regranted.

"16—That said Hultman while police commissioner of the city of Boston did wilfully or negligently fail to discharge the duties of said office in that about 10 days before the state election held in November, 1934, he issued an order requiring special officers and police inspectors to obtain uniforms; in making said order Hultman knew that special officers and police inspectors of the city of Boston operate in plain clothes to enable them the better to apprehend criminals and have no occasion to wear uniforms.

"Said order was made by Hultman to permit greater number of uniforms to be sold to the city of Boston. The order was not made in good faith nor for the best interests of the city, as well known to said Hultman.

"17. While police commissioner of the city of Boston, said Hultman failed to properly discharge the duties of his office in that he caused to be made arbitrary transfer of police officers from one district to another; said transfers were not made for the good of the service but were made without regard for the good of the service.

18—Commissioner Hultman wasted thousands of dollars in photographic equipment unnecessarily. Commissioner Hultman used some of the other photographic equipment for the purpose of taking pictures of his Duxbury home and had them printed as Christmas cards and sent the same to his friends at the expense of the city of Boston.

"19. While police commissioner of the city of Boston, said Hultman wilfully or negligently failed to discharge the duties of his office in the following regards, among others:

"(a) Complaints against night clubs, so-called, speakeasies, gambling places, number pool operators, liquor and narcotic traffic, disorderly houses were not properly investigated and no proper or sufficient action in reference thereto was taken.

"(b) Licenses for taxi stands, junk licenses, pawn broker licenses were improperly, and without any honest or just reason given therefor, granted, refused and revoked.

"(c) Records, fingerprints and photographs of gangsters and criminals were not guarded and protected.

"(d) Records, fingerprints and photographs of gangsters and criminals were surreptitiously taken from the files.

"Derelict in Duty"

"(e) Said Hultman did not give his personal attention to the conditions under which records, fingerprints and photographs were kept or the conditions under which it was comparatively easy for one having no right to do so, to take from the files fingerprint records and photographs.

"(f) In dereliction of his duty, he left this to the exclusive control of subordinate officials and leaders of the department without any proper supervision on his part.

"(g) Reports from the deputy superintendents and division captains were of such a character and tenor that said Hultman should have known or realized that thorough and honest investigations were not made and that thorough and honest reports were not being made to him.

"(h) The granting of pawn broker and taxicab licenses was in fact left to the determination and discretion of one Leo Schwartz; said Hultman did not exercise his own independent judgment and discrimination, but licenses were issued in his name, but in fact upon the decision or determination of said Schwartz. Licenses were refused and revoked nominally by said Hultman but in fact by said Schwartz in his name.

"(i) Said Hultman abolished the narcotic squad and reduced the number of police officers engaged in the prosecution of those engaged in the unlawful traffic, leaving the task of apprehending drug peddlers throughout the entire city of Boston in the hands of one man.

20. During his term as metropolitan district commissioner, said Hultman has acted in an arbitrary and unfair manner, has failed to act for the good of the service and has been guilty of misfeasance, malfeasance, and nonfeasance in said office.

"His Excellency the Governor reserves the right to permit such other evidence as is competent to be admitted during the hearing."

TINKHAM
Halts Soviet RELATIONS QUIZ

By Associated Press

Washington, March 26—An airing of views before the House foreign affairs committee as to why the United States should withdraw recognition of Soviet Rusia was halted today before it even got started when Representative Tinkham, (R., Mass.) refused to agree not to discuss on the floor testimony that might develop in the executive session.

A large group of representatives of patriotic and other organizations waiting in the outer committee room were surprised when Tinkham emerged and announced:

"The hearing is over."

A letter was read from Secretary Hull opposing the Tinkham resolution, on grounds Russian recognition was an executive problem and should be left in the President's hands.

JOHN F. FIGHTS KINGFISH OVER PORT BILL

By International News Service

Washington, March 26—Opposing Louisiana's Senator Huey Long, spokesmen for Eastern seaboard ports appeared before the Senate interstate commerce committee today, supporting legislation to give the Interstate Commerce Commission power to fix railroad rates to ports.

This power was taken from the commission by Supreme Court decision in 1929, and today Federal Transportation Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman headed a parade of witnesses who asked that it be restored.

Former Mayor John F. ("Honeyboy") Fitzgerald of Boston strongly urged enactment of the bill. He declared every "consideration should be given now to building up our ports, in view of world economic conditions." He said improved ports would help swell America's world trade.

When Huey Rules

Fitzgerald chided the government for having taken Mid-Western men to run its shipping business. He pointed out President Wilson took three Chicagoans in succession to run the shipping board during the war.

"When did you ever hear of the governmetn taking a man who knew something about a particular business to run that business for the government?" asked Senator Long. "That's the whole trouble here now. They put fellows in to run a job who know nothing about the work."

"I suppose," countered Fitzgerald, "you are going to change all that when you are President."

Long smiled broadly.

"Well," added Fitzgerald, "I wish there were more men like you in public life, who take an interest in matters of so vital importance."

Sees Boston Doom

"Thank you," retorted Huey. "While I'm opposed to this bill and you favor it, I would sooner take my chances with you running this business than with the men they now got running it for the government."

Long predicted the I. C. C., by its rulings, would destroy the port of Boston in favor of the port of New York.

He said the commission's rulings had injured New Orleans to the benefit of Galveston, Tex., and that the same situation was shaping up on the Atlantic seaboard.

Fitzgerald replied that loss of an ocean differential in shipping rates had injured the port of Boston. He said this differential formerly was granted the port over New York because Boston was 250 miles nearer Europe.

TRACY REPORTS NEW GAINS

William R. Tracy, general sales manager of the Hudson Motor Corporation, was the speaker today at a meeting of New England Hudson-Terraplane dealers at the Hotel Touraine. The meeting was staged under the supervision of F. A. Ordway, president of the Henley-Kimball Company, distributors. Mr. Tracy said:

W. R. Tracy

"In my visits to various metropolitan centers in the last few weeks I found a decided improvement in general business conditions.

"The stabilization in buying has created a new confidence in financial, manufacturing and distributing circles that points to a tremendous increase in automobile sales in key outlets.

"We at Hudson are very optimistic and thoroughly confident that 1935 will prove to be a big year in the industry."

Wilentz to Allow Bruno More Time

By International News Service

Trenton, N. J., March 26—Attorney-General David T. Wilentz today indicated he would not interpose strong objections to a "reasonable extension of time" if it is sought before the Court of Errors and Appeals here Thursday by counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

The court that day is to fix a date upon which to hear Hauptmann's appeal from his sentence of death.

Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel, has said he will require considerable time to get ready to argue the appeal.

Wilentz said he was disposed to agree to a delay that would permit the defense lawyers to prepare their case.

Chicago, March 26—If the authorities would ask Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted slayer of the Lindbergh baby, just a few questions under the Keeler polygraph or lie detector and then act in accordance with its findings, he would be freed instantly, his wife, Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, declared today.

"If they asked Richard these few questions," cried Mrs. Hauptmann passionately, "the lie detector would show by his replies that, as he said in the trial, he was innocent of the kidnaping or slaying, or any part of it."

Furniture dealers, renters of dress suits, florists and caterers have been calling up the two beleaguered persons ever since. Staton never heard of "Jarrett Anderson Staton" and Mrs. Flanders has never heard of "Doris."

This Is Life

ROBERT E. ROGERS

When it comes to the question of war I rather incline to listen to the scientist rather than to the idealist, the educator, and the preacher, whose unfulfilled wishes set them yearning for something which may be out of their reach.

It may be true that there's nothing good or bad, but thinking makes it so. But thinking certainly does not make or guarantee peace.

Robert E. Rogers

Without reference to the present European imbroglio one of the great biologists of the United States, Dr. Raymond Pearl of the Johns Hopkins, recently allowed that war is a "biologically natural process" and is like to exist for a long time to come.

William James believed that there is something deep within man which makes war a necessity to his nature.

This scholar does not go so far. He does, however, insist the need for security is a fundamental need and where this does not exist, or where the struggle of one people for security clashes with the security of another people, war will inevitably continue to exist.

Quoting another biologist, C. C. Walker, Dr. Pearl said:

"The natural striving after security by one people, that is to say, its natural endeavors to exist, must affect the security of other peoples.

"When a people endeavors to secure its existence, by reason of its automatic reactions to the problems connected with the food supply and with social security, its endeavors will conflict with the strivings of other people who are also subject to the same environmental problem. Each people is only trying to exist—the result is war."

Only Prospect

And Dr. Pearl adds in his own person:

"The only prospect of ending war will be when the human race through interbreeding becomes a rather uniform lot; all looking, acting and thinking pretty much the same way like sheep."

This interbreeding is already in operation.

So far so good. Where a half-dozen nations closely set together on one continent have the same economic problems, the result is bound to be friction and even serious trouble. And the strongly entrenched differences in language, religion, traditions, kultur and custom help to make friction inevitable.

That is why our country ought naturally to be free from trouble with Europe, unless we are artificially dragged in, why there is no prospect of war between us and South America.

In the case of Canada, however, our hundred years peace looks to be a triumph of reason and good will over biology, since in that case all the conditions of biological struggle do exist.

But according to this interpretation we may yet see another war in this country, based, as was the War of the Rebellion, on clearly seen economic difficulties and rivalry. But the war of the future, if it comes, will be between the hard luck, inflationary, disgruntled debtor West and the East it is trying to destroy. If the East can only get the strangling West off its shoulders, as Sinbad got rid of the Old Man of the Sea, we may see a fight yet.

One point of Dr. Pearl's I cannot understand. Only as national and racial isolation diminish, he says, will wars diminish, and this isolation is already diminishing through the increasing ease, speed and cheapness of transportation and of communication.

Very pretty, but I cannot see that easier communication has done anything to make war less likely. Ultimatums fly faster than ever, airplanes have replaced troop trains.

The hair triggers of war are more sensitive and quicker on the squeeze than ever before. All the neighborliness in the world can't do away with economic insecurity.

Dr. Pearl's last statement does not, for all his hopeful intention, negate his first and valid opinion.

The struggle for existence and the survival of the fittest, he seems to say, is quite as true today as when Darwin got the idea from Malthus and invented a new conception of social history.

IT'S JUST GRAND SAYS WOMAN WINNER

Mrs Delia G. Cunniff, who lives at 39 Moraine street, Jamaica Plain, was just plain overwhelmed when she heard she had drawn Southern Hero in the Irish sweeps. She cried:

"Well, God love you!"

She was told that she was sure of getting $3975 for her ticket at least, and that she had a chance as good as anybody's of sharing the capital prizes.

Mrs. Cunniff exclaimed:

"It's just too grand to talk about it."

She proceeded to prove that too, by being unable to talk for a moment. Then she went on:

"I've been buying the sweepstake tickets ever since they first came out here.

"I never got a thing before, but I didn't give up hope.

"Believe me, I can use the money at this time. It couldn't have come at a better one."

Mrs. Cunniff is the wife of Malachi J. Cunniff, Boston business man. The couple are two of the original settlers in the district which is just around the corner from Governor Curley's home. They have no children.

Didn't Use X-Ray

Miss Mildred L. Crandon lives at 14 Pitcher avenue, West Medford. She had Jimmy James, and is sure of the $3975 at least, with an equal chance at the "big money."

A technician, Miss Crandon has been doing X-ray work for a doctor for several years, she said.

But she insisted that her X-ray experience did not give her the ability to see into coming events.

This is the first sweepstake ticket Miss Crandon has ever bought.

But G. Walter Robinson, of 9 Maine avenue, Somerville, who drew Fouquel, a starter, is a regular sweepstakes player like Mrs. Cunniff.

Robinson is a building superintendent at 19 Milk street. Mrs. Robinson said the money would "probably go right into the bank."

William Moreau, known to friends as "Bill," is a letter carrier attached to the Chicopee postoffice. He went to work so early today that he missed hearing the news over the telephone.

He drew Huic Holoa, also listed as a starter.

A kindly neighbor, however, intercepted Moreau on his route and broke the good tidings. He was astonished.

"Nobody's joking us, huh?"

Then Letter Carrier Moreau, who is 40 and single, and has been on the job for 15 years, just breathed deeply and commented:

"I'm happy, all right. I'm more than happy. I'm astounded."

Moreau lives at 100 West street, Chicopee.

Bennie Israel, South Boston, is the proprietor of a market at 115 M street. He lives at 9 Wales street, Dorchester, is married and has a son Sidney, 3.

"I'll buy an auto to take the family out," he said.

[illegible] a domestic at 1021 Beacon street, Brookline, and a native of Ireland, is another winner of $3975 on a non-starting horse, according to official announcement.

"This is the first time I've won," she said. "It's great news. My mother is living in County Mayo and I may take a trip to see her on the prize money."

Mary Bergin of Lowell, who drew Drintyre, a non-starter, is 65 and lives at 59 Nesmith street.

She has been a cook for the family of B. J. Russell for the last 24 years.

"This is the fourth time I bought an Irish Sweepstakes ticket," she said. "No matter how much I win I'm going to buy a new set of false teeth and go back to Ireland.

"I came from County Kilkenny 38 years ago."

William L. Mibos, 138 Pleasant street, Brockton, holder of a ticket on Society, is manager of a restaurant and was formerly prominent as an athlete at Brockton high. His wife is the former Lillian Ricker of Littleton, N. H.

ARREST IN LYNN

Dope Case Ordered

Judge Ralph W. Reeves in Lynn court today issued a capias for the arrest of William Vigdor of Baldwin street, Lynn, on a charge of possessing 292 grains of narcotics.

When told by Vigdor's counsel he was in a hospital in Brattleboro, Vt., Judge Reeves said, as he issued a default:

"Too many drug addicts are dodging court appearances by burying themselves into hospitals."

MULLIN PLEA

To Curb Fires

Acting Mayor Leo E. Mullin of Quincy today appealed to citizens to co-operate with the fire department in curbing brush and grass fires in the city. There have been 100 such fires in the last three weeks.

Mullin asked Superintendent of Schools James N. Muir to impress upon the children the danger of starting fire out of doors.

Police were guarding the Cuban consulate today after being informed that Communists would stage another demonstration. Five men and a woman were arrested there yesterday during a demonstration.

CLOTHING

Code Abuses

ARE CHARGED

By Associated Press

Washington, March 26—Grave abuses in administration of the men's clothing code by the code authority were charged before the Senate finance committee today by Francis M. Curlee, representing a minority of the industry.

Curlee contended the code authority extended a number of exemptions from code provisions to units in the dominant wing of the industry. He cited two exemptions granted to companies which had officials on the code authority. One was an exemption from the hour provision, another from a prohibition against an unfair trade practice.

Curlee, a gray-haired St. Louis clothing manufacturer, cited the power to make exemptions from the code as "one of the major vices of the whole system."

Curlee, testifying again before a capacity crowd, said Congress must decide "whether we are to have a uniform law."

Unknown Wins

A ticket without name or address was drawn today in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes at Dublin.

It was drawn for the horse Thomond the Second, second favorite in the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree Friday.

According to records at Dublin, the ticket was sold somewhere in the United States, possibly in New England.

Two tickets without addresses were drawn for Really True. They were signed "Now or Never" and "Dark Angel."

FRIENDS HAIL BEAUPRE AS "VICTIM"

Captain Charles S. Beaupre, former chief executive of the state police, who resigned, "took it on the chin to cover up somebody else," the committee on ways and means was told today at hearing for reinstatement of Beaupre.

Representative Ernest J. Dean of Chilmark, of the committee, made that charge.

He said Beaupre was asked to resign.

A host of Beaupre's supporters appeared, many of them testifying to his honesty, integrity and ability.

Representative John P. Aspell of Roxbury said Captain Beaupre resigned rather than testify before an investigating board when charges were preferred against his superior officer, General Alfred F. Foote, two years ago.

He said:

"There has never been a complaint against Captain Beaupre. Two years ago charges were preferred against General Foote, then commissioner of public safety.

"Captain Beaupre, loyal to his executive officer, resigned rather than testify. This wrong should be righted."

Rev. Harold Cutbill, of the Third Religious Society, Unitarian, Dorchester, told the committee re-instatement of Captain Beaupre would "reinforce the morale of the state police."

Colonel Paul G. Kirk, commissioner of public safety, appeared in opposition to the bill. He branded it as "dangerous, destructive and a challenge to sound and well-constituted government."

He pointed out that re-instatement of Beaupre would mean the removal of Captain James P. Mahoney, present executive officer.

Representative John Lasalle of Northbridge, although opposing Beaupre's re-instatement, urged a pension as in the case of General Foote.

Dying After

GAS BLAST

Despite heroic efforts of her mother, the name of Mrs. Mary Thompson, 23, of Moulton street, Charlestown, is on the danger list in City Hospital suffering from severe burns.

Her mother, Mrs. Catherine McGowan of Bunker Hill street, was paying her daughter a morning visit when she heard screams and rushed into the kitchen.

Mrs. Thompson had been working over an oven when accumulated gas exploded. Her clothes were blazing, but her mother wrapped her in a quilt.

Eyeglasses Rout Bandits

Eye glasses that persisted in sliding off George W. Taintor's nose put two bandits to flight when they held him up in his gasoline station at Fellsway West and Salem street, Medford.

Sticking a gun into Taintor's ribs one bandit commanded him to "stick 'em up." He did. Then the glasses slipped. They made him so nervous he could not resist, and dropped his hand to adjust them.

The bandits, thinking he was going to draw a gun, fled—taking $40 but without completing their search for more.

TRUCK CRUSHED

Driver Unhurt

Northampton, March 26 (AP)—Luck rode with Joseph Tadie of West Springfield when his truck approached a Boston & Maine railroad crossing here today. He failed to note an oncoming train, which hurled the truck off the right of way, scattering it somewhat widely.

Tadie went with the truck, but remained intact. In fact, after being looked over at a hospital he was told that he need not remain.

Quins Guarded All Night After 'Kidnap Plot'

Callander, Ont., March 26—Alarmed by reports of a plot to kidnap the famous Dionne quintuplets, two men were stationed on guard all last night at the Dafoe hospital.

The Ontario government announced yesterday it was assigning a police guard, day and night, to the private hospital near the Dionne farm, where the five baby girls are cared for.

Although officials refused to discuss the alleged plot, reports said kidnapers had planned, during the next few weeks, to take the children away from their hospital and rush them by automobile and airplane across the United States border.

A. W. Roebuck, attorney-general of Ontario, said he had detailed two provincial police to the hospital at the request of David A. Croll, minister of public welfare.

Croll sponsored the recent legislation making the quintuplets "wards of his majesty the king." Croll said he had asked for the police guard "for the babies' protection."

RICH MINER

Dead in Snow

Montreal, March 26 (AP)—The body of Stanley E. Siscoe, wealthy Montreal mining executive, was found frozen two miles from Lake Matchimanitou, Que., today, according to word received here. He had been missing for a week.

The body was found a short distance from where Siscoe's pilot, Captain Thomas Wrathall, was found yesterday.

The two had been forced down by a heavy snow storm on a flight between Montreal and Senneterre, Que.

BANK THIEF IS DEFENDED

Alfred J. Rollins of Milton, charged with theft of more than $5204 from Lower Mills Co-operative Bank, was defended by Probation Officer Reginald Mayar in Dorchester court today.

Rollins, father of three children, told police he used the funds for a daughter who died after 19 operations and his wife, who died a few weeks ago.

"I do not believe this man is a criminal at heart," the probation officer said. "He went to the bank officials voluntarily. He told them to the exact penny what he had taken—$5204.21. He should receive consideration from the court."

Judge Sadie L. Shulman, who had originally set his bail at $10,000, held him for the grand jury and set bail at $7500. It is understood the bond will be furnished.

Rollins, police say, is a brother of the Charles W. Rollins who was sentenced in 1932 for embezzlement of $30,000 from the Blue Hill Bank

SHIP, 60 ABOARD CALLS FOR HELP

Halifax, March 26—The Belgian steamship Jean Jadot, with a crew of 60, which has figured in two marine disasters since she was built six years ago, was in distres with a broken rudder 450 miles east of Halifax today.

Another storm-battered vessel, the tiny Bermuda packet Longbird, was nearing port in tow of a salvage tug.

The Jean Jadot first broke into the news three years ago when she collided with the Gloucester schooner Eleanor Nickerson off Halifax. The schooner went to the bottom with 21 of her crew.

Last December the Jean Jadot hove to alongside the disabled British freighter Usworth in mid-ocean and took off 15

A Salute to Boston's First Corps of Cadets

On October 19, 1786, Boston's First Corps marched proudly up State Street to the Old State House. Here they were received by the Governor of the Commonwealth, James Bowdoin, the first president of this bank, who presented them with a military standard.

This flag, today a cherished relic at the Cadet armory, was saluted by Generals Washington and Lafayette on their visits to Boston. It was carried by the Corps when acting as escort to President John Adams in 1797. It was draped in mourning in the funeral processions of James Bowdoin, John Hancock and Samuel Adams.

Founded in 1728 to serve as military guard for the Royal Governors of Massachusetts, this historic organization serves as escort to the Governor of the Commonwealth today. With completely motorized equipment, it carries on an active military tradition of three centuries by active service in the Massachusetts National Guard. It is indeed one of Boston's most colorful links with the past.

AUTO SURETY COSTS SOAR WITH ACCIDENT FAKERS

This is the second of a series of articles exposing the false claim racket under the compulsory auto insurance law, estimated by Registrar Frank A Goodwin to be costing auto owners between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 a year.

Wilton has a trick wrist.

It was, until it landed him in trouble, quite an asset.

He made upwards of $3000 profit on it and every time he profited, Massachusetts auto owners lost.

TAKE A LOOK! GET ME TO A DOCTOR
Mor.

His profits were the insurance company losses, and the compulsory rates went up.

But he didn't care; he registered his car outside the state.

The manner in which Wilton received this trick wrist is a story all by itself. Police say he was practising a boarding-house reach on a free lunch bowl at a wayside tavern counter when he slipped from the stool.

However it happened, he fractured the scaffold bone in his left wrist.

This accident, the genuine one, was the only one of a dozen involving the wrist upon which he never collected any insurance.

The injury wasn't very serious and when the splints were off Wilton discovered, at first to his dismay, that he had acquired a wrist that he could throw out of joint at will.

"Hit of Party"

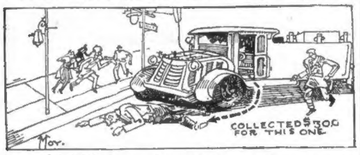
He used to do it to entertain his friends and was the hit of the party.

Then it occurred to him he might make some money with it.

Thrown out of joint, and extended with upturned hat, it would have been a great come-on for the panhandling game.

Wilton figured—like so many others—that collecting under the Massachusetts compulsory auto insurance law would be easier.

So he proceeded to become involved, under a different name each time, in no less than a dozen auto "accidents" out of which he emerged, immediately on each occasion, with a fractured and dislocated wrist, and subsequently on each occasion with a cash settlement of about $300 damages from some insurance company.



Sometimes he was a passenger in a car in collision, sometimes he was the driver. Sometimes he was just the unfortunate pedestrian.

A Lawrence motorist was amazed one day when Wilton jumped on the running board of his car and began berating him.

Tries Wire Trick

"Why don't you look where you're going? You darn near killed me. Take a look at that and get me to a doctor."

The startled driver had that dislocated wrist shoved under his nose and was convinced he had hit a pedestrian. He rushed Wilton to the nearest doctor's office; the wrist was snapped back in place, X-rays were taken and the old wrist was strapped up. An insurance company settled.

One day in Lynn Wilton was driving a truck. It was dusk and there were few persons around and little traffic moving when he spied a section of unused trolley wire hanging from the overhead lines of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway.

He drove the truck under it and broke the windshield with the wire. Then he swung the truck sharply into the curbing.

Then he stepped out with his trick wrist looking like a permanent deformity and went into a faint. He collected another $300.

This went on for a long time. Wilton and his trick wrist would come popping out of accidents here and there all over the state. From flopping beside the cars of unsuspecting motorists he became an expert tumbler. From howling with the pain of his "injury" his voice took on the throaty timber of the lion's roar.

Finally the lines of the old fracture would barely show on the X-ray plates and justice caught up with him one day when he made the error of going into a flop beside the car of an insurance company inspector who saw every move of the act.

Wilton confessed. He is now keeping his trick wrist strictly within the confines of New Hampshire where there is no compusory insurance law.

100 to One

Where one such fake claim is discovered, one hundred cannot be proved.

Registrar Frank A. Goodwin has asked Governor Curley for 100 trained investigators for the motor vehicle registry. They would work in coordination with the police on immediate investigation of accidents when they occur.

Goodwin said:

"The insurance company investigators do not investigate until weeks or months after an accident or a claim. By that time the case is all cooked up and the insurance company can find out nothing from witnesses. The result of this is that the insurance company, realizing it will be licked in court, settles.

"State investigators would investigate immediately each case and they would know who was and was not hurt.

"A great number of claims are settled from $100 or $200 and 20,000 of such are being settled annually."

(Another case from the false claims racket that is boosting compulsory insurance rates will be told tomorrow.)

SEX IN MOVIES ON WANE, SAYS HAYS

CITES SUCCESS OF CLASSICS

By Universal Service

New York, March 26—The sex motif is on the wane in motion pictures, Will H. Hayes, "movie czar," declared here.

In its place, he said, a new art is developing, combining the culture of literature, the opera and the stage with originality of direction.

Hays' remarks were contained in his annual report on the film industry as presented in his capacity as president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc. He added:

"It has been easier to underestimate than to over-estimate Main Street's intelligent appreciation of quality entertainment.

"There is no limit to the height to which popular appreciation may be raised by the inspiring appeal of ever better entertainment.

"There are no boundaries to the creative efforts of an art that has as raw material for its productions all of drama, all of music, all of literature and all of life."

Hays cited the success of Dickens' "David Copperfield" and Barrie's "Little Minister" to support his contention the public wants the best of the world's literature presented on the screen.

He noted increasing production of musical and operatic films and "the growing demand for romantic comedy as against lessening interest in sex drama per se."

GOODWIN HITS COURT 'LAXITY'

South Boston district court today became the target of Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles, in his new war on alleged court laxity on automobile violations.

He hit at South Boston court on the heels of a charge that only 26 persons out of 249 arrested in Massachusetts for hit-and-run driving in the last year have been given jail sentences.

Citing a South Boston case, he said, a taxicab driver, operating his car at 60 miles an hour while under the influence of liquor, struck and killed a pedestrian on August 29, 1934. He said:

"The case has been strung along until now and I just received word that this man was found guilty.

"He was found guilty of driving while under the influence of liquor and of driving to endanger the lives and safety of the public, but, strange to say, he was not punished.

"The court for some unexplainable reason placed both cases on file.

"If this is the way the courts are going to punish drunken drivers who are mowing people down on our streets, it's about time for an investigation and cleaning out of a few of the judges responsible."

Goodwin's charge that Middlesex Superior Court showed "the most disgraceful conditions" in hit-and-run cases, brought this answer from District Attorney Warren L. Bishop:

"I am not aware that any such condition exists in Middlesex County. We have prosecuted such cases diligently. No one is let off. If a jury lets someone go, that is something I, of course, cannot prevent."

Laboratories have devoted years of research to discover the facts about bran. These tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a natural laxative food for normal people.

As a result, ALL-BRAN has been accepted by the American Medical Association Committee on Foods, and approved by Good Housekeeping Institute.

Millions of Americans use ALL-BRAN to correct constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in meals. For ALL-BRAN supplies generous, mild "bulk," which continues to be effective when used for months. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and iron, an element of the blood.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

How much better than taking patent medicines! Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

CONGRESS JOBS DRAFTED BY ROOSEVELT

By International News Service

Washington, March 26—President Roosevelt sped southward today for a brief respite from his troubles, leaving behind a set of congressional leaders gloomily contemplating the rest of the session. Most of them would like to be going South, too.

In whatever legislative direction the leaders looked they saw trouble and bickering over bills which Mr. Roosevelt insists be enacted before adjournment. If any serious attempt is made to enact the whole program, Congress may well be in session all summer.

Before leaving, the President told his congressional leaders he definitely wants to have passed:

The social security program, involving old age pension and unemployment insurance.

The NRA extension act.

The legislation to drastically regulate or eliminate certain types of holding companies in the utility field.

A bill to increase the HOLC capitalization by $1,750,000,000.

A bill to give the Interstate Commerce Commission jurisdiction over all types of commercial transportation that engages in interstate commerce.

The bill to extend the government's regulatory powers over food and drug standards.

Opposition Plenty

The foregoing constitutes the White House priority list in legislation. There is opposition of some sort to every item in the list. Some of it is formidable, some of it isn't. But all opposition operates for delay and debate, and many weary weeks stretch ahead of the harassed leaders if they attempt to put through the whole list.

Other measures that Mr. Roosevelt would like to see passed include the ship-subsidy bill, which was recommended in a special message; amendments to the AAA legislation; and amendments to the Federal Reserve Act to give the government greater power over the reserve system.

A veto awaits the soldiers' bonus bill. As for the Wagner labor disputes bill and the 30-hour-week bill, the administration is preserving silence.

President Speeds to Fishing Grounds

By Associated Press

En Route to Florida with President Roosevelt, March 26—Visions of bouts with big game fish rose in President Roosevelt's mind today as he sped southward for a vacation off the Florida coast.

Harry L. Hopkins, the relief administrator, was with him, presumably to discuss details of the government's huge work-relief program.

Before he left Washington last night, Mr. Roosevelt received assurance of remarkable improvement in the condition of Louis M. Howe, his secretary for many years, who has been critically ill at the White House. The President was cheered when his 64-year-old aid awoke from a restful sleep and asked for a cigarette.

SCHOOL Reds Condemned BY LEGION

Thirty-two American Legion posts from Hull to Provincetown joined forces today in the war to wipe Communistic teachings out of the schools.

One of the courses in particular, a social science course in physics, taught in the elementary grade schools, was condemned as a "direct menace."

This course was compiled by Professor Harold Rugg of Columbia University. It is part of the curriculum for the 7th, 8th and 9th grades in the schools in Hanover and other towns.

The District Council, composed of the 32 Legion posts, voted unanimously to adopt a resolution condemning the Rugg course.

The resolution also called for immediate investigation and action on all courses embodying such Communistic teaching.

HEAVEN HIGH—HELL DEEP

BY NORMAN ARCHIBALD

Three months after the United States declared war I was enlisted as private first-class in the aviation service of the Signal Corps. Three more months and I was one of the lucky ones ordered abroad. At Issoudan, the American aviation center, we helped build the camp and laid miniature railroads—in the mud. Without any previous training we started learning to fly the Nieuports, fastest and most dangerous of war planes. We talked, dreamed flying night and day. A test pilot was killed, but his death didn't cool my love for flying. Then suddenly Beauchamp and I were ordered to report to the First Pursuit Group. Arrived at the front I was assigned a beautiful new plane, a Spad. Then I had my first glimpse of the front. We were greeted by heavy aircraft and we sighted seven Fokkers. We were disgusted to hear that a pilot had been ordered back to Orly because of shell-shock.

By NORMAN ARCHIBALD

I realize now that a pilot's first flight over the lines might easily affect his flying attitude for all time.

The WOOF of anti-aircraft explosions means they are from 200 to 500 feet away. But when CRACK thunders in your ear, it warns that shells are exploding within 100 feet.

If one bursts beneath you, rending a hole in the air, the plane, tossed like a cork from the sudden gush of wind, drops helplessly and out of control through the created vacuum until thick air is reached.

Some pilots, who without warning, hear the terrific CRACK, forever have a dread of anti-aircraft.

Others, if shells break close by and shrapnel tears their wings, or if their plane is tossed by the sudden blast, become shell-shocked, "lose their nerve" and are sent from the Front. It either does or does not happen. There is no way to forestall it.

Initial Baptism

The lucky gain confidence. The unlucky lose it. Lucky, on my first trip to the balloon line I heard the WOOFS.

This initial baptism left an indelible impression. The so-called "Archies" had broken far enough away not to startle or terrify me and confident they would never hit, I could not take them seriously but instead was filled with contempt.

This was not bravery. It was simply a first impression that all the CRACKS and WOOFS in the world could never change. Filled with ignorant bravado, I poohpoohed all anti-aircraft stories.

"Do not worry about anti-aircraft," I scribbled in a letter to my sister that night, "they're a joke."

Woody, assigned a plane, had been to the balloon line. He was one of five slated for the next morning's patrol. What news would he bring? What would be his first experience?

The time dragged until two hours later the mechanics, excitedly asking questions, steadied his plane into the hangar.

Woody, with a broad smile, climbed out and looked at his Spad. The wings and fuselage were riddled with German mementos of deadly intent.

"Woody! Why, Woody! Was the whole German air force after you?"

"It sure looks like it," said one mechanic, sticking his fingers through the bullet holes and gazing at Woody with idolizing admiration.

Woody just laughed.

"Twenty-seven! . . . there's twenty-seven! . . . there's twenty-seven, lieutenant!" said the other mechanic and he stared at Woody with eyes full of pride and wonder.

"Twenty-seven what?" asked Woody.

"Bullet holes! Lieutenant . . . bullet holes! . . . Look! count 'em yourself."

Woody laughed aloud as we started down the road to our billet.

"Hurry up . . . tell me . . ."

"Well," he began, "heavy anti-aircraft when crossing the lines."

At that, we both chuckled.

"After patrolling for an hour and a half we started back."

"Yes—yes, go on."

"More anti-aircraft as we neared the lines."

Again we giggled uproariously.

"Not a damned German in sight and, thinking it was pretty tame, I suddenly realized I was separated from the formation and lagging behind.

"Rat-tat-tat-tat-tat, machine guns, and streams of bullets flew past both ears.

"They were very close, so close I wondered why in the world they didn't get me. So . . . push on the stock and with my motor wide open I went into a vertical nose dive. DIVE! . . . did you ever think a plane could dive like these Spads? Her nose was pointed straight down and, hanging by the straps in the air, I said to myself, 'My God! this is too steep,' and pulled up.

"But three Fokkers were still on my tail and bullets whizzed by thicker than ever. 'Steep . . . hell . . . nothing's too steep,' and nosing her over I dropped.

Planes Disappear

Down—down—Lord how a Spad can dive! Surely I've lost them . . . and pulling up I looked back. Not a plane in sight—guess that's about all."

* * *

Air battles were now our daily work. They were not relived nor discussed.

Those in the patrols knew what happened, and others, with their own personal experiences, did not question. A flight ended was a flight forgotten.

But Woodard and I joined the squadron together, were billeted together and, when alone, talked freely.

At night, like whispering schoolboys, conscious of mutual understanding, we confided our reactions to each other.

"Life certainly hangs by a thread up here." I knew he referred to Nevins, killed but a few hours before.

"Just back from a combat over the lines, back and alive, and then to crash up right at the aerodrome."

Nevins' motor had stopped just outside the field. In an attempt to make his customary landing, he was gliding flatly, lost speed, fell off and crashed to his death.

"Seems a damn shame to go that way." Woody was voicing my own thoughts.

But we agreed, Nevins' spill was rather an accident. He should have, with a crippled plane, landed outside the field.

Not tried to make it. Quick judgment, that was the main thing.

"Twenty-seven bullet holes! Lieutenant . . . Look! Count 'em yourself!"

We were realizing how, whether fighting Fokkers or not, a pilot's very life hung on instantaneous co-ordination of thought and action.

"You had a close shave, Woody."

We discussed the dangers over the lines. Death, just over there, was waiting for us. We must face it. Death, every morning, every afternoon, and we must remember it. Think quickly. That was the way to save your skin.

Never, never would we lose our lives by mistake. If we were outmaneuvered in a fight—well, that was different.

That was the way, we supposed, we would have to go. Death was very close to us. How did the rest of them feel, we wondered?

"The other pilots take it calmly enough," and that was one thing neither of us could quite grasp. The utter nonchalance of the others. In fact, we were both groping for a certain understanding.

We were a bit bewildered by the whole affair. The mysteries of this Front business were still vague.

Either we were gauche sentimentalists, we decided, or they were hard-hearted devils.

At any rate their cucumber coolness toward any situation whatever was getting under our skin. Were we different? Or were they steeped in a flying etiquette of which we were still ignorant? Anyway, we liked that phrase, "cucumber coolness"; that was certainly pertinent!

"I know," said Woody, "but is that a mask they're wearing?"

"Perhaps."

"Maybe they're in as much of a blue funk as we are."

We wondered. Perhaps this casualness was a pretense.

We were not quite in the harness yet. It would take a little time. But, we argued, some of them had been here but ten days or two weeks before we arrived.

"And they seem just as indifferent."

Would we feel the same in, say, a week? Would we be real "veterans" in such a short time?

* * *

Beauchamp was ever in my mind.

Why had he not been over? How he would laugh at those seven Germans against the three of us! Must go to the 27th and see him—Good old Beauchamp! . . . would arrange it! . . . very soon.

* * *

During the great American July offensive the First Pursuit Group was stacked against the ablest antagonists. Famous German aces and experienced, seasoned pilots of the celebrated Richthofen's Circus were among our opponents.

Against the 'Baron'

We pitted our skill, green and scant, against brilliant flyers, canny and clever from long experience.

Baron von Richthofen, organizer of his famous Flying Circus, with eighty victories to his credit, was dead. Udet, another German ace, was said to be in command.

We knew these enemy aces by the vivid colors of their planes. Bright yellow, scarlet or bold black and white advertised their importance.

The First Pursuit Group, when on the Toul sector, before I joined, got the impression that German planes, when attacked, ran.

These older members said they used to hunt far across the enemy lines in search of even one solitary plane. It was, according to them, quite a tame, easy-going war.

But, here, this was far from true. Never once, unless the odds were overwhelming, did I see a German pursuit ship run from attack. They did, to be sure, stay on their side of the lines and our combats were fought, usually, over German territory.

This air was alive, all right. Alive with enemy planes. Droves of them!

Tons of shrapnel were exploded in the heavens. We fought before a whelming tide. Hell was let loose.

This was our initiation. We knew nothing different. This was our Front. We had nothing to compare it with. Shell-torn country below. Towns literally blown off the map. Mile-long lines of observation balloons, artillery fire that seemed incredible and tremendous ground explosions which sent dust and smoke-clouds high into the air. Destruction. Chaos and destruction everywhere.

We expected enemy planes to fill the skies. Well, we found them!

We foresaw them waiting to be shot down. Well, they were!

To us, this was the Front! Who had control of the air concerned us not a whit. We were fighting pilots. We knew our job. To fly over the lines, shoot down as many enemy planes as possible, and try to get back alive. That was our business. The cause of the war, who started it or why, meant nothing to us. We had work to do.

How we fitted into the general scheme of things we did not know nor care. We were at the Front! Who would "get it" today? Who would be missing tonight?

Our squadron, we were proud of the 95th, must make a good record.

Pilot Boasts Wins

Luke was being talked about.

His own squadron almost ignored him. So, he would come over to see us, Woody and me, for he had known Woody in the States, and I was an amused listener.

Luke, Light haired, stocky and just twenty years old. The tales he told!

"Well, got another Boche," he boasted and thereby began a recital of such flying and fighting as none could imagine.

"Did you get confirmation?" we parried.

Well, no, he hadn't but, hastily switching to the details of another victory, he so graphically described his personal triumphs, always against such terrific odds, that we would smile, insultingly.

But, Luke was undaunted.

He insisted he always left the formation. So, flying off somewhere all alone, how could anyone see what happened? He was a good flier and a natural pilot. We knew that. He was fearless, too.

But his commander, Hartney, had told him not to leave the formation so nothing hung together.

One evening in front of the operations tent, Luke again was narrating about his prowess. Said he left the formation, saw a German plane about a mile over the lines, had a terrible fight and his opponent went down in flames.

Another flier was standing nearby.

"Those kind of victories are easy," he said with dry sarcasm. "You better go back and get confirmation."

Luke looked a bit hurt. But, launching afresh into another yarn, he novelized a hair-raising air battle in which, as always, he was the hero.

Flower Show Opening Attracts Many Fashionables

By BETTY ALDEN

THE OPENING of the flower show brings June very close to us, even though most of the fashionables who turned out to see the flowers in their first bloom were muffled in furs . . . Because nearly every socialite is enrolled in a prominent Garden Club and will invariably tell you that gardening is her hobby, even though a crew of workers may do all her planting and her delphinium and roses picked and arranged for the table by her maids. The gathering at Mechanics Hall yesterday afternoon had a very social flavor . . .

MARY OTIS

We are not going to describe the exhibits and so spoil your surprise and delight when you see for yourself the wondrous and incredibly beautiful vistas which have been constructed for your enjoyment. If you notice the steel engraving in the program, which illustrates an early Boston flower show in a tent on the Common in 1873, you will really feel that the directors of the show could call this year's exhibit (to paraphrase the World Fair title a little bit) a half century of horticultural progress . . . In 1873 a few flowers were displayed in simple glass containers arranged in even rows on tables, and today we can see whole gardens, just as if they had been transported out of the woods and which require more care and planning to construct than a permanent garden on the most lavish of estates . . .

Apartment Gardens

IF THE BEACON HILL apartment of Mrs. Willard Emery is large enough to allow the luxury of a penthouse garden its mistress' friends will find her digging and planting this summer, for she spent a long time scrutinizing the samples of tiny apartment gardens . . . Miss Gertrude Peabody, of old New England ancestry, fully appreciated the beauties of the June in New England Gardens arranged by the Garden Clubs . . .

Mary Otis, in a leaf green tweed suit, found a real thrill in walking through the forest of wild growth arranged by the New England Preservation Society, of which Mrs. William Brace Pratt is vice-president . . . Mrs. Pratt took time off from directing her friends to this inviting corner to relax in the pleasant lunch room, where refreshments are served al fresco, as it were, in a pine grove with rustic furniture and bright awnings . . .

APRIL Wedding for Leaguer

MISS MABEL WHEATON HATHAWAY, who has announced plans for her marriage at her Lincoln home on April 13.

Books on Parade

By MILES ALDEN

PYLON—By William Faulkner—Smith and Haas.

It has long been feared by the gentlemen of the press that William Faulkner would some day pierce his surgeon's pen into the personage of a reporter.

He has done this with brutality in Pylon. The hero of the tale, if such a term may be technically used to describe the central character of Mr. Faulkner's works, is a lean, nervous reporter, possessed of a wild passion for Laverne, the wife of a barn-storming air-race pilot.

With the captured suspense of a slow-motion picture of a nose-dive, Mr. Faulkner whips the story to its inevitable tragic end.

It is a little late to say that this new novel marks the arrival or turning point of the author. He arrived a long time and will probably take a new turn with each successive novel.

But Pylon does prove emphatically that Mr. Faulkner is not dependent upon degeneracy and horror for his effects.

He gives complete proof that as a "reporter" of human emotions and reactions he ranks without peer on the American writing scene.

HIGH SCHOOL TRAGEDY

By Maxine Canty

Julie Is a 'Miss Watson'

SYNOPSIS

Julie Martin, at 17, becomes an "inside" observer of the police investigation of the murder of her former French teacher, the pretty Constance Sinclair, who had been shot dead in her apartment by a party thus far unknown.

Julie is on the "inside" because after school hours she is office assistant to Principal Perkins and the latter has detailed her as stenographer for Police Inspector O'Brien, who is busy examining suspects and others.

Among those questioned, or wanted for questioning, are Julie herself and her boy friend, Dicky Ward, who was with her when she returned a pen to "Connie" a few hours before the tragedy.

Also in the list are Mrs. Sardoni, manager of the apartment house in which "Connie" was killed; Principal Perkins; Melvin Wright, the school's "problem boy"; Hym, a Filipino janitor, who had been discharged for insolence to "Connie" and who was missing since her death; Bruce Lloyd, her former fiance, who refuses to say where he was on the murder night; and George Carrington, also reported to be a former suitor, who is now married.

The latter seems to have a perfect alibi for the fatal night but he admits to the police that his wife has been missing since that evening. Julie's father has become counsel for Lloyd.

The authorities are anxious to find Mrs. Carrington. Meanwhile Inspector O'Brien urges Julie to keep her eyes and ears open but her mouth shut tight. After a conference with Principal Perkins in the latter's office, the inspector invitees Julie to ride to her home with him.

"I want to see your father," he says in the presence of the principal.

CHAPTER VIII

"What was he talking to you about? I object to his questioning young girls and boys like this."

"He didn't question me much, Mr. Perkins. You know Dicky—Richard Ward—and I were at Miss Sinclair's apartment that afternoon about the pen. I guess its disappearance worries him."

He seemed relieved. I thought he would have liked to ask me more, but he couldn't quite do it.

There's a sort of code among teachers about questioning students or letting them suspect too much what they themselves are thinking. So he let me go.

I was surely glad to depart. I felt rather ashamed. Mr. Perkins had always been nice to me, though he was the kind of teacher you can't warm up to very much, and I had practically lied to him.

During the afternoon, I squared it with my conscience by concentrating on the importance of my trust.

The Inspector was right on time. He and Mr. Perkins were already talking when I got to the office. I worked as slowly as possible, but even so I was through before their conference was over.

I was counting the attendance record for the third time when the Inspector came out of Mr. Perkins' office. He stopped to speak to me, followed by the principal.

"Aren't they working rather late, Julie?" inquired Mr. Perkins.

"Yes, sir," I replied, "but I am just through."

"Then I shall take you home," beamed O'Brien. "I want to see your father."

All the time I was putting on my hat I could feel Mr. Perkins looking at me. I think he suspected I was working for the Inspector, but maybe it was my own guilty conscience.

Anyway, I forgot about it on the way home as I was so excited over driving there with an officer.

"I questioned Perkins rather thoroughly, but your tip on the book hasn't revealed much so far. He admits quite freely that he used to call on Miss Sinclair. He says that they had many interests in common, particularly in the way of books. He volunteered that as a matter of fact she had suggested that he read this book you saw, and that he supposed when he found it on her desk later that she had brought it down to give to him.

"I pointed out that you and the teachers had seen it at her apartment the afternoon of the murder."

Inspector Hedging

"What did he say then?"

"He frowned and was silent for a few seconds. Then he shook his head and said he was as puzzled as I. He stuck to his story that he found it at the school."

"Do you think that—that he was—well—fond of Miss Sinclair?" I asked the question hesitatingly.

The Inspector smiled at me. "Trying to get a romance out of it, little Julie? No, I don't think there was any romantic high school love affair. He seemed to feel quite casual about it, just naturally distressed and pained at such a thing happening in his institution and to a person he liked."

I thought the Inspector was hedging a little. No doubt he was not ready to trust me entirely yet. But his next remark indicated otherwise.

"Now, Miss Julie, I suggested this morning that you might be able to help me. I don't mean for you to go out with a magnifying glass and track down the criminal.

"I just mean that I have found you pretty sane and pretty discreet thus far. It occurs to me that that high school is boiling with excitement and shock over this crime; a public high school is a good cross-section of a town, that is, all classes are represented. Probably Miss Sinclair had some very important relationships that meet there. I think that it is a good place to have a representative."

"Yes, sir."

"People, even when they are completely innocent, are cagey with the police. You are just a kid, someone whom they all take for granted. I believe that with a level head and some power of observation, you might pick up a little information now and then. Would you like to do it?"

"Oh, yes, Inspector," I breathed.

O'Brien was pleased. He flashed a real Irish smile. "Very well" he laughed, "let's say that Sherlock Holmes O'Brien has acquired a charming Miss Watson!"

Kids Grinned

After the ride with the Inspector I had a lot to think about that night and the next day. I really felt that I was entering a new era of my life, that I was truly grown up, and that perhaps I could impress the family with the fact, now that an important person like the Inspector regarded me so highly.

I could hardly believe that I was in my right mind, so absolutely overwhelmed was I by the idea of working on the murder case.

Believe me, though I realized my duty and responsibility, it was terribly, terribly hard not to tell Dicky when I was quivering all over inside with it. I knew the first duty of anyone in my position was to be self-contained.

So I tried to go about studying as usual and reciting in classes. Once or twice I must have made funny answers, for the teachers looked at me sort of queerly and the kids grinned.

I was preoccupied, of course. I had decided that besides keeping my eyes and ears open, I should also try to find out where I had seen Mrs. Sardoni's handwriting.

That strange sort of engraving haunted me; I was not satisfied that it was somewhat common as the Inspector said, for I could see it on that same pale green background. She must use a very fine, steel pen, I mused, and write very slowly. It somehow did not fit into her personality very well.

I had seen her only that once when Dicky and I called on Miss Sinclair. As the Italian woman popped out of her door to watch us go upstairs, I got a pretty good look at her. She was not fat as many Latins are, but rather large, tall, deep-breasted, well built.

Her face was dark without being swarthy, with full lips and great brown eyes. She was wearing a wine-red wool dress that fitted her figure quite closely.

Accuses Bruce

I suppose one would say she was striking rather than beautiful. Dicky thought her good-looking, and I know there were others who said they thought so too. She frightened me that day, coming out so suddenly, and I never could like her.

It may have been the expression on her face that I did not like. She seemed sullen, unsmiling, suspicious. Her knowing so much about so many people afterward may have added to my impression.

Her movements were all quick and gliding, not jerky; she was full of life and energy, I would say from even that brief glimpse of her.

I know that I have read about eyes that blazed, but I never saw any that did until I looked back at her as she watched us up the stairs, just nodding at Connie's pleasant, "Good afternoon."

It may have been the woman's unusual personality that entranced me, but at any rate I worried a lot over her handwriting. I talked to Dicky about it on the way home Monday afternoon.

"Oh, cut it out," he said. "I think we have all thought so much about this darned case that we are going cuckoo about it. Let's talk about the dance for a change."

"All right," I answered amiably, thinking that maybe I was giving myself away. "I'm going to knock your eyes out with a new blue dress."

"And won't that be somepin!"

We discussed our crowd and whom we'd go with the rest of the way home. But when we got there, we were dragged back to the murder again, for there was a swell brown coupe in front of the house and Bruce Lloyd was standing on the porch.

"What's he doing here?" mumbled Dicky, crossly.

RECIPE FOR Hand WHITENING Lotion

Question: Will you please print a simple recipe for whitening hands? I use lotions very extravagantly, and for that reason would like to be able to make an inexpensive one.
Blanche A. S., Boston.

Answer: To whiten and soften hands is such a simple and inexpensive task that there is no excuse for not having a bottle of lotion always on hand. An excellent lotion is made from one ounce of strained honey, one ounce of lemon juice and one ounce of cologne. Mix, and rub well into the hands at night, then wear a pair of large kid gloves, the palms split for ventilation.

Question: Although I am only twenty years old, the condition of my skin makes me appear much older. My face is covered with large pores. Around my eyes are a profusion of wrinkles. Please tell me how I may treat this condition.—J. M., Roxbury.

Answer: Do not be discouraged. At your age the skin can be made over in a comparatively short time with proper care. Since you have large pores in your cheeks, I would advise you to use a good medicated soap, preferably a sulphur soap, to wash your face. Do not use cream on the enlarged pores. After cleansing them with warm water, soap and a complexion brush, pat on an astringent or eau de cologne to close the pores. Around your eyes put a good cream and use the following massage while applying. Dip the cushion tips of two fingers on both hands, index and middle fingers, in the cream and, with a gentle circling motion, smooth the cream around the eyes. Begin with fingers placed on each side of the bridge of the nose, travel upward, circle the eyebrows, around the temples, and down across the cheeks to the nose again.

Question: My face is entirely covered with tiny whiteheads that stubbornly resist every effort to eradicate them. Please tell me what I can do.—E. H., Brookline.

Answer: The whiteheads of which you speak will sometimes come out after the use of powdered pumice or green soap, but if they do not respond to this, I would advise you to go to a competent beautician and have them removed.

Lilacs in the Rain

POSED BY ASTRID ALLWYN.

By THE BEAUTY EDITOR

IF YOU THINK that lilac perfumes are all pretty much alike, you've probably never spent a month in the country and known the exquisite scent of lilacs in the rain.

There are dozens of lilac fragrances, and for each one there are dozens of lovely ladies who will swear that it is the true, the only authentic lilac in the world.

Today we are adding our own entry—a fragrance that has all the youthful freshness of spring. Its lovely scent brings forth pictures of old-fashioned gardens in the bright May sunshine. It seems to whisper of the very earth itself after soft showers.

This perfume comes to us from the far ends of the world, its sponsor being an exiled Russian prince who settled in the Orient after the war. It was while living in Japan—the land of flowers—that he acquired a priceless old perfume recipe, used by long-forgotten beauties of the Russian court. This recipe was treasured for generations in one family.

More as a hobby than anything else, he began experimenting in blending oils and essences. He soon found that he had captured the fragrance he loved—a night in Persia—the delicate cherry blossoms of Japan—the exquisite scent of lilacs in the rain.

"My friends would not let me rest until I finally agreed to make these three perfumes for every one to enjoy," the prince says. "At first I hesitated. Perfume is so personal—so individual. Each woman wears perfume differently. Sometimes even the same scent will be shaded by the woman who wears it so that it does not seem the same.

"It was this discovery that made me very happy. It gives each woman her own fragrant memory in the minds and hearts of others."

Hold a bottle of one of these perfumes under your nose, close your eyes and you will see before you orchards of lilacs and cherry blossoms. You can almost touch the blooms inside.

To learn the name of this exquisite lilac perfume and the two other exotic fragrances, call Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for a personal reply.

Fashion Flashes

MANY of these smart women whom you see about town wearing individual looking suits have not visited the most exclusive shops in New York, which you are most apt to suspect from their appearance.

If you haven't found suits of the same degree of chic it is because you are not on to their little trick.

Nine chances out of ten these girls have assembled their own suit. A jacket picked up here, a skirt picked up there, and together they make a highly distinctive costume.

One of the smartest ways of doing this is to choose a dark skirt with checked jacket or vice versa.

Tiny "Miss Ideal 1936" Wins Writer's Disapproval

By SHEILAH GRAHAM

They are butchering the female form divine again.

This time a mere trifle of thirty-four pounds has been deducted from our dose and dose.

At the Beauty Convention held a few days ago at the Pennsylvania Hotel, 35,000 Beauty Shop owners throughout the nation decreed Miss Ideal 1936 must be a wispy morsel of 100 pounds, thereby going back on their last year's dream girl to the tune of 34 pounds.

And 35,000 beauticians can't be wrong. Only this time they are. When I've stopped laughing, I'll explain why.

Last year when the beauticians commanded us: "Ladies, you may now eat, drink and grow fat," what happened? Exactly nothing.

Do any of you know of a single female slim faddist who altered her mode of living last year? I'm not referring to the ladies who are fat by nature or laziness. Like the poor, they will always be with us.

The majority of women did not rush to stuff their stomachs with food. The average lady did not suspend her dieting and massaging at all. The streets and subways were not suddenly transformed into backgrounds for fearful fat females.

And why? Because we all know—I know I did—that there was a catch somewhere in the magnanimous beauticians get-fat movement.

We expected they were indulging in the horrid game of putting up a skittle of fat one year for the sadistic pleasure of knocking it down the next. And how right we were!

Now, when they decree as casually as though mouthing "Good morning"—

"Reduce your weight from 134 to 100 pounds. Your bust from 35 to 30 inches—a thought in passing—the poor bust has received the dirtiest of all treatment from the beauticians—one year it's high, the next low; another year large and yet another non-existent. What do they think we are—chameleons?"

When they ask us to perform a miracle sleight-of-hip trick by shrinking it from 45¼ to 33 inches, and the waist line from 26½ to 23 inches, the majority of us can smirk impishly back at them and giggle "So's your old man."

I sincerely hope women will have nothing to do, and do nothing toward achieving the 100-pound Miss Ideal 1936.

Mrs. Beeckman

Duties of Guest Hostess

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. I am from the country and am now living in the city, acting as guest hostess in my brother-in-law's home. He has three boys and a girl. Is it all right for me to suggest that they invite some boys and girls in while I am here to oversee, or help them get ready for a party?

I do not feel that they do enough in that way as they are invited out quite often, or would that seem officious?

2. When my brother-in-law has guests to dinner, when dinner is announced, should I lead into the dining room ahead of the other ladies?

And, if so, should I seat myself as soon as I reach my chair, or wait until all the guests are standing at their chairs? In case one person waited to fix the radio to suit himself, should we still stand and wait for him? S.

1. I am sure that you will plan this kind of thing so graciously and exquisitely with these girls and boys of the household that they will "rise up and call you blessed." With such kindness in your heart as you have about them, there will not, I am sure, be the slightest tinge of "officiousness."

2. Since these dinners will apparently be informal, the group of guests will walk into the dining-room casually—no set order, but the ladies first, of course.

Since it will be you who will indicate the seating, you might go first, to stand by your place and tell your guests where they are to sit.

You would not take your seat until you have indicated the seats to your guests.

I hope that it isn't the custom of the house to have the radio on during dinner—it is so difficult to "talk against it"—but if a guest do as you say, I suggest that you, during this adjustment of the radio, seat your other guests and leave to the last your indication of his place at dinner.

By that time, we will hope that he will be finished with the radio-adjustment. If he isn't, he will take his place later.

If you want your boy to be a young husky, keep him up to his proper weight, as shown on the CHART AT RIGHT ABOVE. See that he gets his full quota of nourishing, body-building Hathaway's Bread every day!

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

The Ghostly Lover

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Here is an interesting letter about a complex common to many — perhaps in a much milder form but, nevertheless, falling under the same psychological heading.

Later I will explain how this case can be applied to many of us.

"Should I continue going to see a girl who says she loves me because I look like the fellow she was previously engaged to? I have the same name also. He died about a year ago and she still cries every time I see her. Do you think she loves me—or is it just this resemblance which causes her to imagine she loves me? I love her very much, and if I could make her forget the past I am sure that we would be happy. "H. [illegible]"

SHE IS NOT IN LOVE

This girl is not in love with the man who reminds her of her dead fiance. She has formed an image in her imagination—an ideal which probably has nothing to do with the man who died. But this image, or ghostly lover, has become more real to her than any actual person. Whenever she meets a man she pins this ghostly lover image on him.

HOW THIS CASE CAN BE APPLIED TO MANY OF US.

Are you fickle in your affections? Do you think you are madly in love only to discover later that the person you thought ideal is really just a prosaic and everyday man or woman—and you can't understand how you ever thought them so extraordinary?

Well, you are suffering from the ghostly lover complex. You have formed an image in your subconscious mind, and you may think you have found the right one whenever you meet an attractive person—simply because he or she has some of the attributes of your imaginary ideal. Your desire to make a reality of this ideal is so strong that you are always ready to throw the cloak of your imagination over this person. This is the reason for the old expression, "Love is blind." Then, of course in time you see the person as he—or she—really is and think that he has changed—not realizing that you are merely seeing him clearly for the first time.

The tendency then is to find someone else and go through the same performance all over again. Unless you can realize the underlying cause of this behavior you may go on endlessly, never finding a lasting love.

COOKING RICE

A bewildered bride [illegible] cooking rice so that [illegible] grain will be flaky and separate.

For one cup rice have ready two quarts boiling water [illegible] three teaspoons of salt. Wash the rice thoroughly in several waters until all the loose starch is removed. Drain. Have the boiling water ready in a deep saucepan. Add the salt, slowly drop in the rice and allow to boil for 12 to 25 minutes or until a grain pressed between the thumb and forefinger is entirely soft. Lift the rice with a fork from time to time. Do not stir. When tender turn the rice into a colander or sieve. A little hot water from the faucet or tea kettle may be run through the rice to wash the starch away. After the hot water has run through, cover with a cloth and set over a pan of hot water on the back of the range or in the oven or turn the rice into a shallow pan and place in a warm oven for a short time. Treated this way the grains are separate and flaky.

Another letter asks whether it is necessary to boil mushrooms in preparing them. Also how can they be cooked without turning dark.

There is no reason mushrooms should not turn dark. In fact the gourmet knows that fresh mushrooms are always dark when properly cooked. The canned mushrooms, which are prepared by steaming in the can are the button mushrooms, found only in France and of a different texture. They are a delicate, pale brown. But fresh mushrooms as prepared for creaming or for adding to a sauce or chicken a la king first have their caps peeled with a silver or stainless steel knife and their stems cut off. Then they are sauted in melted butter until a dark brown on the [illegible] cut in half [illegible] a delicate creamy color inside.

To obtain a tender, delicately cooked slice of ham fry it in the skillet, add a small amount of milk to barely cover the slice of ham.

SAVORY HAM

- 4 thin ham steaks
- Juice of 2 lemons
- 2 teaspoons Worcestershire Sauce
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1-6 teaspoon curry powder
- 1-4 teaspoon paprika
- 2 tablespoons chopped paprika
- 1-2 green pepper, minced

Blend together the lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce, sugar, dry mustard, curry powder, paprika, chopped parsley and green pepper. Lay a slice of ham on a deep plate, put a teaspoon of the seasoning mixture on it, then another slice of ham and so on. Set aside for two hours while the ham marinates, basting occasionally with the seasonings. Then broil the ham until crisp. Heat remaining seasonings and pour sizzling over the ham. Makes 4 servings.

RILEY DEATH FIRE PROBED

The mysterious fire in which Edward Riley, 45, was burned to death in his home on Sohier street, Cohasset, was being probed today by Edward Murtaugh, state fire inspector.

Horse Charter Becomes Political Football

THE PLAIN PEOPLE of Massachusetts, who voted to lift horse-gambling above the vugar level of crap-shooting, number pool and faro banking in the November elections, are patiently waiting while the Beacon Hill statesmen comb over the rich horse-plant candidates to see which has the quickest cash and the sweetest real estate deal.

Austen Lake

This amounts to playing poker, with the plain people's chips for a jackpot.

But, being docile and sometimes pretty dumb, the plain people realize that this takes a little doing, lest the statesmen later suffer convulsions of remorse for having hastily handed this treasure trove into ungrateful hands, and thereby lose their just due.

The plain people do not wish the statesmen to suffer, which is purely a plain people's prerogative.

Massachusetts in the Middle

MEANWHILE WALTER O'HARA, the rich Narragansett, R. I., horse business man who is known as Mister, unlike the non-rich horse types who are known as Two-Bit and Greaseball, has cut himself three fine slices of fruit cake, which include 66 racing days. And Mr. Lou Smith, the Rockingham, N. H., proprietor, is fixing to announce another 65 days very soon.

This leaves Massachusets in the middle, as the paper-shelled pecan between the edges of R. I.'s and N. H.'s cracking pincers, with a great scramble for the pick of the country horse stables and a three-way competition in dates.

Not only that, but unless the State House fathers grant somebody a charter very soon, the wilderness spots of East Boston, or Norwood, or Framingham cannot be transformed into lovely garden spots with a hard, dirt saucer, stretches of lawn and a country club scene.

* * *

The Homely Triplets

THERE ARE DISADVANTAGES in the sites which have been offered thus far. Norwood has a town zoning law, requiring incoming industrial building to be submitted to a public vote, which will take time and is by no means certain to result favorably.

East Boston has scrabbly, undecorative surroundings with gas tanks, sandy flats and a smudgy landscape.

And the best site in Framingham, the Muster Field, is State-owned and would require an agony of prolonged legislation to be made available, if at all.

Without knowing, I doubt whether any of the three groups has perfected its financing scheme, or has progressed much beyond tentative soundings by engineers or delightful water-color drawings by architects.

Nor are any of them quite sure, if they should win a charter, that the courts will not suddenly exhume and enforce the 1856 Blue laws, which give a community the final decision on whether it wants a track with people steering cars into parking spaces, or have its approaches cluttered up with low persons selling papers and hot dogs.

Even Governor Curley, who is very loving toward East Boston, does not feel certain that the courts will not whang down on the lucky winner, because only lately he advised prospective investors in race properties to keep their cash padlocked lest they repent their folly in the judgment that is to come.

* * *

Illegitimate Cream

BUT THE PLAIN PEOPLE of this State want to go to the horse parks and gamble their money on the uncertain possibilities of the steeds' legs, and inasmuch as they will gamble either here or across the state border, just as U. S. citizens drank their drams during prohibition in Canada without marring their consciences or breaking the law, it is likely they will get their wish.

The people want to gamble!

The State wants a cut of the kitty!

But if it is revenue that the State requires, it is denying itself 85 per cent of its just income from the gross betting traffic and will merely be skimming the top of the cream that flows past the pari-mutuel separators.

Because, under race prohibition, when betting was a State sin in Massachusetts but a virtue in Rhode Island and New Hampshire, there were scores of bootleg commission parlors around Boston, Worcester and Springfield, where tons of out-patients' money were shovelled daily.

This form of gambling, then as now, was illegal and therefore subject to no tax.

* * *

Two Years to Recover

NOW THAT WALTER O'HARA has pulled out of Massachusetts in a huff and foresworn any connection with the socially prominent horsemen, it has left the scene to the blue-book group, who always speak of their love of a horse for the sake of its glossy hide, the arch of its neck and its wine-stem legs.

This is curious, since the same men are skinning their shins for a park franchise, where they can promote the animals' wind and limb for profit.

Because, whether he loves a horse for its own sake or not, the Massachusetts track owner has just two years to recover the $1,200,000 investment which his plant will require.

After that a 5 per cent demand by the total voters of the county where the track is located will send the question of legalized betting back to the people of the State.

* * *

THE STATE RACE COMMISSION, since Thomas Cassidy was added, has not considered the horse question, being engrossed in the miasma of greyhound charters and the steamboat wails of the towns where they are located.

This is because dog racing is a political cocklebur in the statesmen's pants, while horse racing is the paramount plum and therefore appropriated by the Beacon Hill fathers as their private political football.

Gino had the better of the going until the last minute. He shook the young Irishman up with [illegible]

Danno took it for 15 minutes. Then, seeing red, he sailed into the Italian and drove him to ropes.

When Gino extended his right arm to ward off Danno's wicked right hand punch, the Irishman seized it and applied his now famous Irish Whip.

Garibaldi protested that he had not been pinned, but the protest was overruled.

In supporting matches Gus Sonnenberg and Joe Vargas drew in 30 minutes and Jim McMillen threw Casey Berger in 20.50.

CAPTAIN ARGO RATED BEST

Mr. Boston
Why the Delay?

By Jack Conway

WHY ALL this silly delay about granting a license for a race track in Massachusetts?

I was [illegible]

Last week I [illegible]

Mr. Boston

[illegible] now [illegible] for a track immediately.

Personally I don't care who gets the license. I am only interested in seeing a track under construction, men at work and plans being made for a healthy racing season.

Suffolk Downs in East Boston, according to [illegible], has the inside track in the fight for a race track license.

The Norwood race track group has repeatedly called for a showdown on the question of a permit but to date has got nowhere.

The Norwood property would make an excellent spot for a track as it is situated in the country, and within easy riding distance of Boston.

There has been talk that East Boston and Norwood racing interests would merge and [illegible] Norwood is the spot for the track.

* * *

WALTER O'Hara, owner of Narragansett Park, told me that he was informed by members of the Eastern Racing Association they were the only group which could get a race track permit in Massachusetts.

I think the public has tired of the Massachusetts racing wrangle. They are disgusted watching the race track game being kicked around by politicians and persons who are anxious to commercialize the turf game on a very high scale.

I would suggest that the Racing Commission announce it will grant a license within a certain time and give all persons interested in obtaining a license an opportunity to be heard.

SMITH'S VIEWS

I HAVE always had considerable admiration for Lou Smith, owner of Rockingham Park. He has been the pioneer in New England racing.

"That's water over the dam," Lou said when I mentioned this fact to him. "All I now want is an even break in racing dates in New England. If the various tracks are going to clash, nobody will make any money and we shall kill the game.

"I am willing to enter into a sensible working agreement with Walter O'Hara and the owner of any other track that may be built in Massachusetts.

"I tried to convince Charles Adams that he should use his influence to have the Massachusetts track located in the country, but he appears set upon East Boston.

"I have always felt that one of the strong selling points in regard to Rockingham and Narragansett has been the location of these tracks. They are situated in the country.

"People get as much of a kick out of a day in the country as they do from watching the horses. Especially if they fail to pick winners."

Dempsey, Baer and Fitz [illegible] have proved they [illegible] punch as well as [illegible] the test of a [illegible].

PURSES of Head Play $36,250

MRS. MASON'S RACER FIT

By Associated Press

New York, March 26. Of all the horses brought out of cold storage to meet defeat in the Santa Anita handicap by Azucar, Mrs. Silas B. Mason's Head Play is the only thoroughbred to justify thus far the confidence of his owner.

Twenty Grand, after slight success on the Pacific Coast, was shipped to England. Equipoise was retired to the stud, leaving only Mate of that former luminary rate of stars to continue campaigning in America.

Gusto, 3-year-old money winning champion of 1932, has not won since being brought out of retirement.

But Head Play, by winning the Bay Meadows Handicap Saturday, boosted his winnings for the first three months of the year to $26,2[illegible] to stand second in the 1935 money winning race to Azucar, which won more than $100,000 in the Santa Anita Handicap.

Head Play is strictly a mud runner [illegible] quarter distance seems a shade too far for him. He has not won a race on a fast track since he was a two-year-old in 1932 and has never won at a [illegible] The middle distances, 1 1-16, 1 1/8 and 1 3-16 miles are his favorite when the going is slow.

Purchased on the eve of the 1933 Kentucky Derby for $30,000 by Mrs. Mason, Head Play was nosed out after a stretch duel with Col. Bradley's Broker's Tip. BOYS Pray for RAIN

ENTIRE TEAM NEEDS REST

By Joe Cashman

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 26—Babe Ruth isn't dead, but the entire Braves club is dead on its feet.

Bill McKechnie blames the bogging down, which has resulted in seven straight defeats, on the weather.

It's been too good.

The boys came down for [illegible] shine and heat but they've had far too much of both. They're boiled out to the point of exhaustion.

"The best thing that could happen to us would be to run into rain for the rest of the week," Wilkinsburg Will declares.

"Everybody is so weak after a month of continuous broiling that he's in grave danger of getting injured whenever he plays more than a few innings.

"Winning games has become of secondary importance. My big task is to get through a contest without adding to our hospital list.

BOW TO SOX

"A week ago everybody was in shape to start the season. Now they're all worn out and won't regain their pep until rain provides a breathing spell or a cooler climate is reached."

The Tribesmen acted as lifeless as Boss Bill [illegible] second game with the Red Sox.

They were in the fight all the way in the opener when they lost 6 to 5, but they were outclassed from start to finish as they fell 7 to 2 in Sarasota.

3 HITS, NO RUNS

In the sixth inning, for example, Coscarart opened with a single. Moore singled [illegible] Ruth getting his first safety of the series, smacked a single to right-center.

The net result was exactly three men on base [illegible] tered for Berger popped out and Lee [illegible] play.

Manager Joe Cronin and Rick Ferrell, each with three blows, led a Red Sox assault on Fred Frankhouse and Huck Betts.

The Tribesmen also committed four rank errors to keep the hurlers in hot water.

But the reports of Ruth's death was still [illegible]. And tomorrow is an open date. So the Tribesmen have something to be thankful for even though they must tackle the Yanks this p.m.

The N. E. A. A. A. U. is to hold a 15-kilometer walk for the championship of New England on the mile track around the Playstead at Franklin Park, Sunday, April 28, starting at 3 p.m.

SOX WINNING, TRIBE WEAK

By Associated Press

New York, March 26—Thanks to [illegible] powerful hitting by the Brooklyn Dodgers and Pittsburgh Pirates, the National League has cut away into the American League's early advantage in the annual grapefruit belt championship.

The standings today showed 24 victories for the American League and 18 for the National in inter-major league spring competition.

Casey Stengel's Dodgers, with three victories in as many starts against American League rivals, head the parade, with the Pirates triumphant in four of five games with the Chicago White Sox close behind.

For the American League the St. Louis Browns have the best record in inter-league games, three victories and one defeat, but the Philadelphia Athletics and Boston Red Sox have been the heaviest winners. The A's and Red Sox each have won five games and lost three.

The National League's record would be much more impressive had the St. Louis Cardinals and New York Giants, picked by many experts to finish one-two in the forthcoming race, held up their end.

Together the two clubs have suffered twelve of the defeats chalked against the older circuit. The Boston Braves, despite Babe Ruth's presence, also have contributed heavily to the bulge the American League enjoys, dropping six of their eight games.

Taking into account all games, whether against National, American or minor league opposition, the Dodgers hold the [illegible]. They have won seven out of eight.

In behalf of one of the oldest patriotic [illegible] in the Commonwealth, Lieutenant Ross [illegible], president of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, today endorsed [illegible] oath.

Teachers and professors should consider it both a duty and a privilege to take the oath of allegiance to uphold both the state and federal constitutions.

The [illegible] which is now before the Legislature should be passed upon with celerity.

It is true that there are only a small number of professors and teachers teaching subversive propaganda in this state, but if the bill becomes mandatory it will expose those that are members of a minority party attempting to overthrow our government.

The many teachers I have come in contact with are willing and ready to swear allegiance. The Boston Evening American is to be highly commended for the interest it has taken in the passage of the bill.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

"The Crack of Doom"

Adventure of a Young Lady Who Slipped Right Through It

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY!

"P. S.—I've never been sleigh riding since." That's the way Miss Greta Bardet of 1161 Blvd. East, West New York, N. J., winds up the account of her big adventure, and by golly, I don't blame her a lot, because that big adventure came doggone close to winding up Greta. If there was any truth at all in the skeptical idea that miracles don't happen any more, Greta would never have lived to tell this yarn and draw down 10 bucks for the sheer oddity of her experience.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Here, boys and girls, is a lass who has done something nobody ever did before, and nobody could ever do again if they tried for a million years. But at that, I can't think of anybody crazy enough to even want to try it.

Greta [illegible] for sleigh riding. At least in [illegible]—but [illegible] in the country, where [illegible] and the going is likely to be dangerous, [illegible] winter sports for boys and girls from eighteen on up to eighty.

And so Greta's gang, when they want to go sleigh riding, just load a few sleds in the back of a car and [illegible] out into the country, where you can find a long, steep grade and a run for your money.

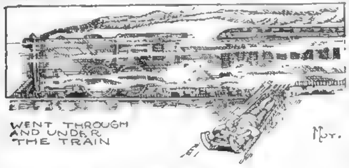
That's what the gang was doing [illegible] years ago—the night that Greta had [illegible]. The whole doggone gang had piled into cars and were cruising around the countryside looking for a suitable spot to do their [illegible]. They found it, along about 8 o'clock in the evening, on [illegible] Hill at [illegible], N. J.—a long, precipitous grade, [illegible] little signs of recent usage.

The only bad feature about that hill was a railroad track that crossed it about three-quarters of the way down. But Greta and her pals solved that problem by stationing a lookout at the track to watch out for trains and signal when one was coming.

They coasted for about an hour and everything seemed to be all right. No trains had passed and the lookout down by the track was having an easy job of it.

It was getting to be almost time to start back home now, but Greta was going to have one last ride before she called it a day and stowed her sled back in the rear of the car.

She stood at the top of the hill and waved to the lookout for the signal to come ahead. The lookout waved his arms in answer. Greta lay flat on her sled—was given a healthy shove—and off she went, careening down the slippery hill like a shot from a catapult.



WENT THROUGH AND UNDER THE TRAIN
Moy.

It was great to be whizzing along at forty or fifty miles an hour with the white road streaming by beneath you and the snow flying up and slapping you in the face.

Greta peered down at the lookout and realized, with a sudden catch in her throat, that he was still waving—not casually, as he had when she started, but frantically now—motioning her to stop—turn out—sheer away from those tracks.

At the same time she heard the toot of a train whistle clear and piercing in the winter air.

She dug her toes into the snow. They wouldn't hold. She tried to swerve the sled. It struck a rut, straightened and headed for the tracks again. It was going at a breakneck pace—too fast to do anything with. The wheel of her [illegible] the spot [illegible].

All Greta could see of that train was the great, grinding, spinning wheels. Fear froze every muscle of her body. She could have jumped, but she didn't think of it. Didn't think of anything. Those wheels caught her eye and held it—seemed to hypnotize her with their deadly, spinning grace.

She saw herself dead—torn to pieces. She wondered what her friends would do when the train had passed on and it was all over. The engine passed as she watched it. The second freight car came to the crossing as she hurtled down the last few feet and plunged toward the turning wheels. She shut her eyes.

Greta's next sensation was a cold chill as if a pail of ice water had been dashed into her face. She opened her eyes then—found herself lying in a snow bank. She looked around her and didn't believe what she saw.

The freight was thundering on, but it was behind her—not in front of her. SHE WAS ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE TRACK.

It was her friends who told her what had happened. Even now Greta can hardly believe it. Her sled, traveling down hill at a speed faster than that of the train, had passed between two sets of wheels and came out safely on the other side.

Well, sir, if Greta has never been sleigh riding since I don't know as I can blame her. If a thing like that ever happened to me I don't think I'd even trust myself in a wheel chair.

Greta had the doggonedest piece of luck I ever heard of, and I'm going to make that a challenge to the rest of you adventurers. Come on, now! Let's see if one of you hasn't had an even bigger stroke of luck. Send that story in tonight.

And don't miss tomorrow's thrill—"Smoke in the House."

AROUSES Former Star's Hollywood Hopes

By George Holland

I hear that Brother Fred's tremendous success in first, "The Gay Divorcee," and now, "Roberta," has aroused Hollywood hopes in the heart of Adele Astaire.

George Holland

Adele left the footlights when she fell in love with an English nobleman. She is now Lady Cavendish. Her marriage split the most famous dancing team in musical comedy, but Brother Fred went it alone successfully to become one of the biggest attractions in [illegible]. His dance with Ginger Rogers in "Roberta" actually makes an audience applaud. The big surprise of Fred's performance is the dancer's piano-playing. It is a talent that many of his acquaintances, including this one, did not suspect.

* * *

In his musical comedy days, Mr. Astaire was not much of a party boy. That is he rarely attended those after-theater gatherings featured by the presence of Alex Aarons, one of his producers; Alfred Newman who was conductor of all of the Astaire shows and is now director of music for United Artists Studios, and generally the Gershwins, Ira and George.

* * *

I do remember, however, a small get-together in a Philadelphia hotel when the Astaire show, "Funny Face," was being readied for Broadway. Fred sat quietly through the party and George Gershwin and Al Newman each did a chore at the piano. Perhaps Fred was shy in the presence of these professional musicians. But he certainly did not venture near the piano.

Startling tricks can be evolved now in motion pictures, but if Fred Astaire's scene at the piano in "Roberta" is a case of dubbing, then it is the most realistic and convincing piece of substitution I have seen.

* * *

Alex Yokel followed your correspondent ten years ago as the press representative of one of the important New York producers. For ten years he has been stabbing at fame and fortune, a manuscript under his arm generally, and brave plans for [illegible] production. Two months ago Alex got one of his favorite masterpieces into production, the astute Jacob Wilk of Warner Bros., furnishing the capital.

Mr. Yokel is now the producer of "Three Men on a Horse," the biggest comedy hit in New York. A company is being prepared for London, another for Chicago, and one is promised for the East, Boston to be the first stop.

* * *

P. S. Charles W. Koerner, RKO divisional manager, [illegible] me by telephone that Fred Astaire's piano-playing [illegible] a matter of [illegible]. I [illegible] slightly amazed.

A Dancer a Comedian and a Star

Fred Astaire, one of Hollywood's most versatile young men, continues at the Keith Memorial as the dancing star of "Roberta," now entering its third week. Irene Dunne and Ginger Rogers are his partners in the musical romance.

Chevalier's Friend in Film Debut

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, March 26—I have never known of as much discussion over any subject as to what will happen to Countess de Maigret, Maurice Chevalier's friend, in movies. A lot of Garbo-maniacs are shouting from the house tops that she will never be another Garbo, and a lot of other people believe with the right roles she will head straight toward stardom.

Louella O. Parsons

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is giving the countess a chance. She will be seen in "China Seas" with Jean Harlow, Clark Gable and Wallace Beery, with Tay Garnett directing. Jean will see that she gets a break for she is the kind of a girl who never tries to steal the show.

Tay's book, "Man Laughs Back" is just off the press and I am reading it immediately.

* * *

If "Maytime" is produced with all the costumes of the period and all the delightful Sigmund Romberg music it ought to be a beautiful operetta. Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy will be costarred and they believe at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer that this following "Naughty Marietta" should be good news for the theater owners and fans throughout the country. When I talked with Jack Warner about three months ago after he sold the rights of "Maytime" to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer he said Warners had parted with it because their successes had been largely with modern screen musicals and this in some way didn't fit into the Warners' scheme of things.

* * *

Claudette Colbert and others who are holding houses out here don't know what to do. The [illegible] stopped until the motion picture industry decides whether or not it will stay in Hollywood. [illegible] other states [illegible]. I just received a letter from A. S. Henderson, president of the Las Vegas, Nev., Chamber of Commerce, [illegible] me he is sending [illegible] with an invitation to the studios to move there.

Chatter in Hollywood: Harpo Marx feels frustrated these days. Seems he saw "Tobacco Road" seven times on Broadway and determined to play the part of the aged grandmother when the play opened in Los Angeles. The role calls for a big degree of pantomime and Harpo ranks second only to Charlie Chaplin in that. A deal was tentatively set in New York but apparently Jack Kirkland the playwright and producer, wasn't willing to take any chances on the inevitable Marxian gags.

The First Lady of the 1934 Screen

Claudette Colbert, selected by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences as the finest screen actress of the 1934 season, comes to the Metropolitan Friday as the star of Paramount's "Private Worlds."

Schubert Film Tops New Fine Arts Bill

Tomorrow the famous Gaumont-British musical film, "The Unfinished Symphony" takes over the Fine Arts screen.

Based on the romantic life of the [illegible] Franz Schubert, the film comes direct from record-breaking runs of 12 months in Paris, 14 weeks in Rio de Janeiro, three months in Copenhagen, and has recently been given a triumphant American premiere at the Roxy Theater in New York.

Helen Chandler, American screen star, Marta Eggerth and Hans Jaray, popular Viennese stars are featured in the film, which has been directed by Willi Forst, author of "Two Hearts."

The Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, the chorus of the Vienna State Opera and the internationally known singing group, the Vienna Boys Choir, supply the musical background.

* * *

On the screen at the Majestic for its first American showing is "The Runaway Queen," which introduces the beautiful Anna Neagle for the first time since her performance in "Bitter Sweet."

Based on the Oscar Strauss operetta "The Queen," many of the famous Strauss melodies have been retained in the score.

Miss Neagle has recently appeared as leading lady for Jack Buchanan in the London production of "Stand Up and Sing."

Soloist Superb

By Ann Ames

At the last but one of the Monday evening Symphony concerts, Dr. Serge Koussevitzky presented the young Boston violinist, Ruth Posselt, as his soloist last evening.

With the benefit of Boston prestige, and the sponsorship of Boston society, this gifted young artist, having just returned from a successful tour of Europe, has recently been decidedly in the musical spotlight.

She has played here before. Yet not until last evening, with the magnificent support of the Symphony Orchestra, has she been heard to such advantage.

* * *

The Tchaikovsky D Major Concerto is hardly the choice for the musical philanderer. The slim, blonde, and charming Miss Posselt, beruffled in white ostrich, with a jade green chiffon kerchief tucked in her belt, is hardly the pictured concert artist. Even the late glorifying Mr. Ziegfeld, or the all-seeing Mr. Earl Carroll might easily succumb to the charms of her graceful carriage, her poise, her youth and her showmanship.

But with the amazing talent that is hers, this gifted young woman reveals, after a lapse of several Boston seasons, a splendid warm tone, an emotional and intellectual concept of her art, a facile technique and a fluid quality to her playing that only the most gifted musicians achieve.

Particularly in the opening Allegro was Miss Posselt at her skillful best. The violin is not a particularly gracious medium for feminine talents. A Maude Powell comes but once in a lifetime. Yet the mantle of that gifted artist may easily be worn by the youthful Miss Posselt.

* * *

In this reviewer's opinion, the obstacles in her path are negligible. Chief among them is the adulation of well-wishers who would overlook the one obvious defect in her playing.

For it is only occasionally that Miss Posselt gives evidence of expressing the inner content of her music. She is young. She is extremely gifted. Her command of tone, her bowing (as vigorous and compelling as one could wish) is superb. With due regard to the consuming demands of music there is no reason why she cannot attain the heights of [illegible] to which she must surely aspire.

The Beethoven Overture to "Leonore" No. 2 and the Strauss Tone Poem "Also sprach Zarathustra" for which our Boston conductor has such an overwhelming predilection, both superbly played, were given.

Stories of the Opera

The readers of the Boston Evening American may know the stories of the operas to be presented by the Metropolitan Opera Company at the Boston Opera House during the week of April 1. Ann Ames of this newspaper has prepared and will publish a brief outline of each of the eight operas in the order in which they will be presented. This is the fourth of the series.

"Lakme"

When the diminutive coloratura soprano, Lily Pons, signed a five-year contract with the Metropolitan, Leo Delibes' opera, "Lakme" was once again restored to the repertoire.

In a nearby city a festival is being celebrated and at the opening of the second act, Nilakantha and Lakme enter the public square disguised as penitents, the Brahmin intent upon finding the perpetrator of the sacrilege.

He commands Lakme to sing, and hearing the voice of his beloved Gerald betrays himself. The priest tries to assassinate the young officer, but Lakme with the aid of a faithful attendant takes the wounded Gerald to a forest hut where she nurses him back to health.

PAIR CONTINUE AIR "FEUD"

By N. F. T.

Whether my friend the merry "Old Maestro" of radioland likes it or not, his network and columning nemesis, namely Walter Winchell, steps in to share his 9 to 9:30 studio spotlight (WEEI) this evening.

It's what they call a second guest artist engagement, sort of a "return bout." Ben and Walter did some wit-matching behind the "mike" a couple of weeks ago and loudspeaker patrons apparently went for the feature in a decidedly huge manner.

"N. F. T."

No single situation born of broadcasting has aroused more concern and attracted more listener attention than the long standing so-called "feud" between the alleged Broadway bad-boy and the happy-go-lucky band boss. They have been taking "pot-shots" at one another for three years and more, each enjoying the razor-edged repartee to the full. Ear cuppers from coast to coast have likewise entered into the spirit of the manufactured "malice" they would have the air audience believe exists. In reality there is no "bad-blood" between them. In fact they are professionally and personally closer than two flakes in a Vermont snowdrift.

POET OF THE PEOPLE

Edgar A. Guest, America's famed poet-philosopher, who writes for this newspaper, will be starred as the leading character of "Welcome Valley," a new dramatic program which will be present each Tuesday night henceforth, starting tonight (WBZ) at 8:30 p. m. This new "Welcome Valley" sketch, which succeeds the "Musical Memories" series, will go on the air from Chicago studios.

Anna and Lillian Reilly of Somerville, talented juvenile radio stars, who have been heard on two X-9 Club broadcasts, will entertain in person at the Martha Lee Cooking school graduation, this evening in the Boston American building. Catherine Callinan will accompany Anna and Lillian at the piano.

TUNEFUL TURN

Franz Lehar's "Merry Widow," one of the most popular operettas of all time, will be revived for the radio audience by the "Beauty Box Theatre" group (WEEI) tonight between 10 and 11 o'clock. Gladys Swarthout, Metropolitan Opera star, and John Barclay occupy the leading roles.

Following last week's program of Irish melodies celebrating St. Patrick's Day, Grace Moore includes a group of striking love songs during her concert broadcast (WBZ) this evening at 9 p. m.

Miss Moore will sing two songs, "Because" and "At Dawning" that have come to be sentimentally associated with weddings. She will conclude her program with the appealing "One Alone" from Sigmund Romberg's production "The Desert Song."

SECRET AGENT STARS

Little songstresses, Mimi and Genev Galdi, the Somerville sister combination, who were Boston American "Secret Agent X-9" program guest artists a few weeks back, have been responsible for an abundance of fan mail since that airing. As a result they come back to the 6:30 setting (WAAB) with "Uncle Newt" tonight.

A—Jean is not on the air at the present time, devoting her time to developing dramatic art, although she may return shortly.

Q—Through what station and what time does Dick Grant broadcast?

M. M. of Chelsea.

A—Dick is not doing regular duty and only speaks on special occasions as public affairs on Beacon Hill might warrant. Consult newspaper listings.

Q—Let me know if "Captain Henry" on the "Showboat" actually plays the cornet or is it someone else? Who is the new "Capt'n Henry" character?

E. H.

A—Yes, he does. He is Frank McIntyre.

HANEY REVIEWS

Recent Market Action

By Lewis Haney

(Professor of Economics, N. Y. University)

New York, March 26—The composite stock market averages gained 1½ points last week. This was chiefly the result of a move on Thursday, when rumors of developments favorable to utilities brought some buying, largely short covering.

Bonds were relatively backward, and showed little change on the week.

The stock market did not recover the ground lost in the preceding week. Indeed, it is difficult to see why it should, since there has been no fundamental change in conditions.

It seems best to regard this little rise as a sort of "technical rally" based upon an oversold condition and aided by renewed fears (or hopes) of inflation.

The outstanding gains, considering volume of trading, were in North American, Consolidated Gas, and Columbia Gas and Electric. And fresh evidence of underlying inflationary developments kept gold and silver stocks firm.

A further average gain of 1½ points on this move would be a normal expectation.

It is certainly going to take more than Kennedy's "cheer up" talk to start recovery. He told New York business men that "things might be worse," and chided them for not "taking it" like a man. But what about business? What about profits?"

What is money (which is the life blood of business) going to be worth?

It is also going to take more than "inflation treats." The House passed a bonus bill providing $2,000,000,000 in greenbacks.

But the stock market hardly batted an eye. Inflation talk and inflation policies which do not "carry through" merely increase uncertainty and produce deflationary effects.

It seems clearer than ever, that we must either deflate or inflate. We can't go on much longer, half-inflated and half-deflated.

GOVERNMENTS

U. S. government obligations were mostly higher. The Treasury's announcement that around 80 per cent of the called 4th Liberties would be converted into the new bonds, was favorably received.

COTTON Plan Perils SOUTH

BUREAUCRATS IN NEW MOVE

By B. C. Forbes

Is it kind, or will it prove harmful, to cotton growers for the administration to lend them on 1935 cotton more money than it can be marketed for?

B. C. Forbes

The government already has on hand upward of half a dozen millions of bales on which it advanced 12 cents a pound, as well as several additional millions of bales previously "hocked" at 10 cents a pound.

Naturally, this enormous surplus stock hangs depressingly over the market. Presumably, the administration does not intend to go on year after year accumulating bigger and bigger mountains of unneeded cotton.

Presumably it means to dispose of its embarrassingly gigantic holdings.

Lately, alarm has become manifest in cotton trade circles. The open market quotation fell sharply below the supposedly "pegged" 12-cent level.

Fresh in the minds of market operators, of textile manufacturers, of growers and of foreign interests are America's unfortunate experiences in trying, through government scheming and lavish government spending, to bolster up staple agricultural products above world prices.

Without here and now discussing the wisdom or unwisdom of distributing many millions of taxpayers' money in rewards for not raising cotton, and without analyzing the soundness of taking off the hands of growers many millions of bales at fancy prices, it is legitimate and timely to note what the consequences have been.

As already stated, government warehouses are glutted with unwanted cotton; and how the government is to dispose of it without incurring demoralization and serious loss, is an unanswerable question.

But, infinitely more serious is the tragic undermining of the United States as the world's provider of cotton.

OUR BUREAUCRATS HAVE RAISED A PRICELESS UMBRELLA OVER OTHER GROWING COUNTRIES.

For the first time, more than half the cotton requirements of the rest of the world are being supplied, not by the United States, but by competitors.

Let our hoarding of the domestic product by the government at higher-than-world prices continue, and the final upshot threatens to be calamitous for the whole South and for the whole country.

HISTORICAL

Price Cycle Followed

The similarity in the trend of commodity prices since the World War and movements after the Napoleonic Wars and the Civil War indicates that history is now repeating itself according to the Business Conditions Weekly of the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

The price cycles of the 19th century thus provide a basis for determining the future price trend to which particular attention is now being given in view of the recent sharp break in the price of cotton and the reactionary price tendencies shown by a number of other commodities.

After the Napoleonic Wars, the general trend of prices was downward for about 29 years.

The Civil War was followed by a downward price trend for nearly 33 years. In view of the length of these price movements, is is reasonable to believe that the decline which began in 1920 has not yet run its course since only 15 years have elapsed since the World War peak was reached.

The fact that prices have shown an upward tendency since March, 1933, cannot be used as evidence that a long-term rise is now in progress. Both price declines in the nineteenth century were interrupted by temporary rallies.

The current advance appears to be nearly a duplication of these former rallies.

This is indicated by the fact that it started at practically the same level as the other two.

The price index at the beginning of the 1934 rally was 60.3; at the beginning of the 1879 rally, it was 58.2; and at the beginning of the current rise it was 59.8. It may thus be expected that the current rise represents only a temporary rally which will give way to a continuation of the long-term downward trend.

The weakness, which has recently developed in the commodity markets, raises the question as to whether the peak of the current rally has been passed.

The durations of the upward movement in the 19th century indicate that the current rise has not completed its course.

The rise which began in 1834 lasted 31 months, while the rise which began in 1879 lasted for 36 months. The current rise has been in progress for only 25 months.

This suggests that the current weakness is only a temporary reaction, such as those which featured the post-war rallies in the last century, and that this will give way to a further rise before the peak of the rally is reached.

In other words, the peak should not be reached before the end of this year or the beginning of next.

Canadian Pacific

Pamphlet report of Canadian Pacific Railway Co. for year ended Dec. 31, 1934, shows net income of $6,469,790, equivalent, after allowing for 4 per cent preferred dividends, to seven cents a share on the 13,400,000 shares (par $25) of ordinary stock.

This compares with $1,257,161 or 0.91 per cent on $137,256,921 preference stock in 1933.

Potent RECOVERY Force

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

After a slack winter period in which news was rather scarce the building industry is getting ready to make the financial headlines again.

As Professor Sprague of Harvard has so often pointed, the emphasis on recovery plans will ultimately fall on the building industry. In his statement to stockholders, President Clarence M. Woolley of American Radiator, points out that there are at least 4,000,000 persons employed in the building industry during normal times. National recovery is nothing but a myth while all but a very few of these are eliminated from the normal consumer population.

The Belgium trade treaty plus depreciation of the Belga will be a potent force in reducing construction costs, promising, as it does, competition with home-made manufactures. A move in the right direction, possibly, but we cannot help but cross our fingers. The reason is found in another remark of Mr. Woolley's. He says important refinements in manufacture made it possible for the company to increase hourly wage scales to a point nearly equal to 1929. At the same time some prices have decreased from 33 to 40 per cent below 1926 levels.

C. M. Woolley

Notebook: It seems American industry is moving along the right road to lower costs without sacrificing labor . . . It would be too bad to force any move that would hurt workers . . . Such as the destruction of protective tariffs . . . In the final analysis good prices make good wages and good profits . . . Which is a plain way of saying prosperity . . . We become more and more convinced it is not the move toward higher price levels in itself which hurts . . . But the artificiality of that move.

* * *

Bearishness is on the upgrade. We take to selling ideas with less enthusiasm than was the case a week or two ago. In review it appears that our rally level of 94-96 held and the anticipated move to 100-101 took place. A sudden dip followed. In no way was logical technical action violated. A renewal of acquaintance with the 94-96 area would be a good thing. Then the slow base we feared was spoilt by [illegible] a chance of construction. Real bullishness would be possible in such an event.

* * *

The average follower of the market does not realize how far and fast many issues fell. In many instances speed on the downside equalled anything seen in a bear market. If the list is able to hold at the 94-96 zone on the 30 industrial index, or even lower down at 92-94, some very rapid recoveries would be in order. It seems to us that for profit opportunities there is nothing to do but study the market for a buying level. The downside has been fairly squeezed in the last three months.

STOCKS Sluggish AT CLOSE

COPPERS ARE FIRM

New York, March 26—The stock market today was dull and sluggish with reactionary tendencies most pronounced in steels, rails and industrials.

Spiegel May Stern rallied 3 points after being down 5 points in the forenoon.

Coppers were firm throughout. Rubbers were supported by a sharp rise in the price of the commodity. Consolidated gas held well in the utilities, while oils fluctuated in an extremely narrow range.

Chrysler and Hudson were down in the motors, but regained some of their losses. Tobaccos were under further pressure, with losses exceeding a point. Sugars were weak. American Can lost a point and du Pont was heavy.

Turnover approximated 400,000 shares. Commodities were firm and bonds mixed. The Belgian belga, which collapsed more than 2 cents to a new record low in the forenoon, regained half its loss in the late dealings.

Current Reports

As the market opened sentiment was bolstered by the following factors:

The report of American Radiator showing the first profit in three years. Net for 1934 of $1,455,227, or 11 cents a share compared with a loss of $881,575 in 1933.

The spurt in net income of Eastman Kodak from $4.76 a share in 1933 to $6.28 a share last year.

Earnings of Phelps Dodge of $3,224,915 in 1934, or 60 cents a share, compared with net loss of $83,568 the preceding year.

The rise of 46 per cent in new automobile financing for February indicated by the preliminary estimate of the Department of Commerce in its comparison with a year ago.

On the other hand, some market followers saw as a cause for unrest the charge of wire monopoly leveled at the American Telephone & Telegraph Company by Western Union and Postal Telegraph.

Opening foreign exchange markets were featured by a swift plunge of the belga to 20.27 cents, off 2.08 cents, the sharpest decline during the current downturn of uncertainty over the currency's future.

The pound sterling was off ⅛ cent at $4.78. The French franc at 6.59¼ was up .00⅛ of a cent.

BOSTON MART

Trend Irregular

An irregular trend prevailed in dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange. Trading was very quiet.

Swift & Co. showed a loss of 1⅛ at 15⅞ and First National Stores lowered 1 to 46⅛.

Maine Central preferred gained ½ at 17.

Fractional losses were shown by American Telephone, United Shoe, New England Telephone and Boston Elevated.

Pullman Profit

Pullman, Inc., report for the year ended Dec. 31 1934 shows net profit after all charges of $2,957,670, equal to 77 cents per share on the 3,820,473 shares of capital stock outstanding.

CURB

Prices Are HIGHER

New York, March 26 (INS)—The Curb market was irregularly higher today, with aggressive bidding up of favored issues more than offsetting weakness in a scattering of stocks.

Duval Texas Sulphur was outstanding inthe specialty group, advancing 2 points to a new two-year high at 11½. Dow Chemical rose 1⅜ to 82⅞; and Ohio Brass B was 1⅛ higher at 20⅜.

Utilities were spotty. Cleveland Electric Illuminating advanced a point to 28½, against a loss of ⅜ in Electric Bond & Share.

Phoenix Securities preferred featured the investment trusts with a spurt of 1⅛ points to 37.

Metals were irregular and alcohols were heavy, while oils were generally higher.

Bar Gold

London, March 26 (AP)—Bar gold declined ½ penny to 145s 7d. (U. S. equivalent $34.81).

Belga In Fresh Collapse

By International News Service

New York, March 26—The Belgium belga collapsed for the second successive day today, falling more than 2 cents to a new record low of 20.27 cents.

The crash, following one of over a cent yesterday, reflected the news from Brussels of the formation of a New Deal cabinet which has refused to pledge opposition to devaluation of the currency.

The plummet-like fall in the belga failed to have any important repercussions on other foreign exchanges.

The remaining gold bloc currencies were firm, with the French franc up ⅛ of a point at 6.59¼ cents, or just above the gold shipping point.

Andes Copper

Andes Copper Mining Company, controlled by Anaconda, shows for 1934 a net loss after depreciation but before depletion of $150,576 comparing with similar deficits of $1,147,524 in 1933 and $1,415,945 in 1932.

LONDON

Awaits Berlin RESULTS

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service.)

London, March 26—The Stock Exchange was inactive and uneasy today, waiting results of the Berlin talks and Belgian politico-financial developments.

Metals exceptionally advanced from individual reasons. Silver spurted a halfpenny to 27⅞d, the highest since 1928, on eastern buying induced by the United States policy.

Copper was strong, from a reported New York agreement, on a turnover of 3800 tons. In lead and zinc more than 4000 tons were bought in expectation of revision of the British tariff.

Copper, also silver and lead shares were higher, but South African golds were depressed, partly from unreasonable fears, from Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's statement that the United States is full up with the metal.

Taxpayers' Plight
They Lack Defenders

AGAIN we lift our voice for the nation's taxpayers.

They stand in the dock charged—with industry, frugality and self-dependence.

They are accused of possession—of having something which somebody else wants and proposes to take.

They have no defenders. In fact, they are denied the right of counsel.

The indictment under which their savings are to be expropriated they have neither seen nor has it been read to them.

They are not even to be heard nor allowed to lift their voices in protest or comment.

MEANTIME, GOVERNMENT—municipal government, county government, town government, State government, national government—spends, appropriates, distributes, allocates, seizes, requisitions, wastes, dissipates, as if there was no end of it, the rapidly disappearing fund which by diligence and self-denial our best citizenship has by toil and saving accumulated.

Nay, more—as if the producer of what the economists call "wealth," and which in fact may be little more than a humble cottage or a trifling hoard for age and adversity, had no right in it which government is under any duty to respect.

It is time that this insensate and stupid attitude of government changed.

A glimmer of intelligence should be enough to supply the restraint which government for its own ends should exercise.

THE TAXPAYER of the nation should be protected and safeguarded, not ploughed and plundered as if his destruction were a pastime.

IS PUBLIC CONSCIENCE DEAD IN THE UNITED STATES?

Have our politicians and even those of better calibre in public office lost their reason?

THIS THING CANNOT GO ON!

The time will soon come when the taxpayers, spurred by desperation, will achieve what they need for protection and that is ORGANIZATION—and with it the power to scourge from office every faithless representative who has despoiled them so unconscionably.

Either this, or the complete prostration of the taxpayer, his inability to respond to government's exactions and government's inability to gratify its lust for easy money, will be the result.

Gains for Industries
In New England

Gains for New England industries feature the news of the week.

Favorable weather has stimulated retail trade, which has also been spurred by the nearing of Easter.

The drive to modernize homes has spread cheer among the building trades.

Several shoe manufacturing centers report more activity.

Amesbury hat makers announce operation of day and night shifts. The boat makers there say orders are running in substantial volume.

Textile plants making cloths are enjoying increased payrolls and employment, although other textile work is lagging.

New Hampshire and Maine centers tell of employment gains. Similar reports come from the Blackstone Valley.

We hope these "business straws" are significant and will not fail in their promise of a genuine Spring upturn.

For Your Own Sake
Obey Traffic Signals

Registrar Frank A. Goodwin does well to call attention to the result of a traffic survey made at Huntington and Massachusetts avenues.

It revealed that four out of every five pedestrians disregarded the traffic signals.

Since pedestrians are not by law compelled to obey traffic signals, some may decide the traffic signal system is of no great value.

But the fact evidently is that pedestrians regard the signals as for automobilists and not for themselves.

As Mr. Goodwin says, pedestrians should realize that the signals are designed to make the highways safer for them.

If pedestrians will co-operate with the signals, there will be fewer casualties.

The Swallows Win
It's an Old Custom

The swallows again were victorious in their annual war against the swifts for the possession of the nests in the walls of San Juan Capistrano Mission in California.

They arrived, as they always do, on St. Joseph's Day. Not even a storm at sea delayed them.

They fought and won.

Casualties: Five dead on each side.

If they do as they have for 68 years, they will leave on San Juan's Day, October 23.

Why?

No one knows.

Or maybe the Radicals who are sure they can alter human nature and the sentimentalists who are certain they can outlaw war can tell us.

Finish Seward's Work
Building 49th State

The Government's plan to colonize Alaska by grub-staking families in order to bring the population of our territory up to Statehood status—200,000—is a form of domestic "imperialism" and "paternalism" to which no American can bring objection.

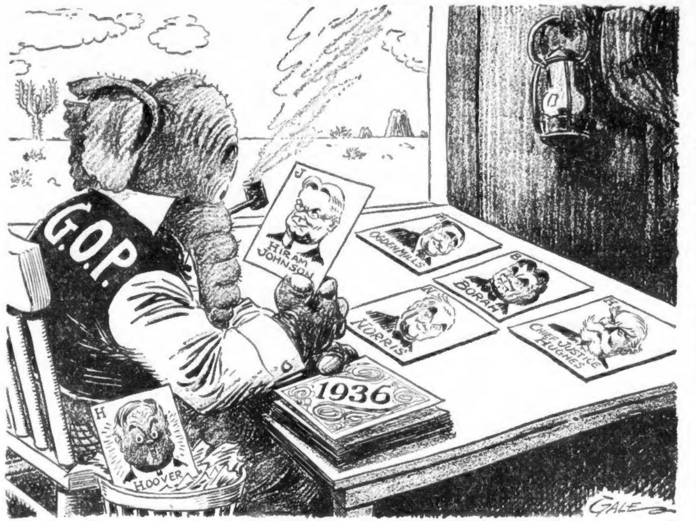
Alaska should be fortified immediately.

This vast territory is the western key to America from the Orient. An enemy from the East MUST NEVER GRASP THAT KEY!

There are covetous eyes set on Alaska.

The far-seeing work of William H. Seward will not be completed until Alaska is a State with a well-fortified coastline.

SOLITAIRE



"It's a long time between elections when you are not in office," the puzzled pachyderm appears to be saying to himself as he studies the cards in the hope of picking a likely winner.

About all he knows is that the banner-bearer must be an American-minded American and not an internationalist; a progressive, but not an extremist.

Most radicals don't know where they are going and most conservatives don't know where they have been.

The G. O. P.'s destiny is in the cards, but which card will it be?

Listen, World
By Elsie Robinson

HAVE YOU "EMPATHY?"

People—you wonder about them, don't you? You realize that they are tremendously important in your life; that you need to get along with them. But how?

Elsie Robinson

Outwardly you're able to show a friendly front, but inwardly you're puzzled, often irritated, sometimes frightened. "I just can't click," you cry.

You know you shouldn't feel like this. It blocks your progress, spoils your chances, leaves you miserably lonely. But what can you do about it?

If only you could be one of those lucky mortals who achieve popularity without effort.

WHY MEN SUCCEED

How smoothly they get along with the most ornery creatures; how easily they win anyone's confidence—while you, despite your best efforts, seem always faced by an invisible barrier. Why?

It is because they're sympathetic? But you're sympathetic, too. You're generous and good natured—sorry for troubled people, tolerant with bad people.

Yet nobody seems to appreciate your sympathy. Some people even resent it.

Flattery? That also gets you nowhere. Gifts and services? Sure—they'll take anything you give.

But then what? Is there something else—some mysterious approach of which you're ignorant?

Yes, there is. And that approach is the most important and powerful force in human relationship. It is deeper than pity, stronger than love, infinitely more persuasive than flattery. Yet we haven't a name for it in our English language.

THE COINED NAME

Dr. W. Beran Wolfe, the famous psychiartrist, feeling that lack, coined a name in his book "HOW TO BE HAPPY THOUGH HUMAN". He called it "EMPATHY."

Lonely, bewildered men and women asked him—as you have asked—how they could get along with human beings. Asked how they could understand and be popular with them. "Develop EMPATHY", said he.

What is EMPATHY? It is SYMPATHY — plus. The word "sympathy" is taken from a Greek term which means "feeling WITH." EMPATHY means "feeling IN."

You can feel WITH people all your life—pity them, rejoice with them—yet never get beyond the locked door of their reserve. But if you have EMPATHY, they're yours for keeps.

If you have EMPATHY, you don't feel FOR or WITH the Other Fellow—you feel IN him. You feel about his problem exactly as you feel about your own.

You don't stay on the outside of your own life, patronizing, judging, or offering friendly advice. You accept yourself AS IS, for better or worse, even when you can't understand your own behavior.

You may be ashamed of your conduct, or irritated at it, but that doesn't weaken the bond between YOU and YOURSELF.

You're as friendly with yourself when you're bad as when you're good.

You're even friendlier because you need friendliness more when you're bad than when you're good.

In other words, you're always PARTNERS WITH YOURSELF, regardless of outward appearances or inward moral rating.

That's how you get along with yourself, and that is also the secret of getting along with the Other Fellow.

THE SIMPLE TRUTH

If you have EMPATHY, you don't analyze the Other Fellow's acts—you accept them as you accept your own and make the best of them, whether you approve of them or not. You don't say, "I'm in sympathy with him." You say, "I AM him."

Which, of course, is the simple truth. You're not really APART from all other human beings. You're A PART of them.

There's nothing that any normal human being feels which isn't also felt in some degree by every other normal human being. In thought and desire we're all of a piece.

If you'll put aside your snootiness and remember that and act upon it, you'll never lack for popularity. For that's EMPATHY—the art of FEELING IN. And EMPATHY is a free pass into every human nature.

Stars and Stripes

No new rules appear to govern the extra dummy usually found at Boston bridge tables.

Tax possibilities are unexhausted in Massachusetts. How about a per capita tax on sea gulls?

We hope Mr. York's proposed forest parks will be better patronized than many of our deserted city parks.

Harry Hopkins says politics has no business in relief. And he might add that neither has graft.

If you start a forest fire, stop it before it gets under way.

A ten-inch cow has been dug out of the ruins of India. Here the agricultural "Brain Trust" would plow her under again in jig time.

With $4,880,000,000 for reconstruction relief, Uncle Sam will soon be in position to "blow the works."

John Jacob Astor, 3rd, has got a job. That leaves only 11,999,999 of us still out of work.

A noted writer says it is cheaper to go to California than it is to stay home. California, here we come!

Sandwich man who went insane when he found $42,000 in Wall Street has regained his sanity, showing that some CAN return to normalcy, if they go crazy first.

Our veterans don't object to going on the greenback basis. When it comes to money, many have seen so little of it they are color blind.

New York Day by Day
By O. O. McIntyre

New York, March 26—Noel Coward, sailing for far away China, was wry with the acrid after-taste of his first defeat since his spectacular zoom across the theatrical horizons. He came cropper on "Point Valaine," the lustful Caribbean play he believed his best work.

O. O. McIntyre

He expected to scale a new peak and the fervor of the "Dear Noel" first nighters ballooned this hope. But the critics saw things differently as did the public that made scanty appearance during its short run. Frankly puzzled, he lapsed into artistic sulk.

It's his intention to abandon himself to some tag end of the world for a little solitude and then work on another play. For Coward, with all his lacy attitudes, is not easily squelched. Before he hit his stride he had been on the off end of some mighty critical swats.

There was one of his early plays in which he was the bright particular star. London booed and hissed it soundly. But "Cavalcade" made him the fair-haired boy and sprouted rumors of a knighting. His bruises are all aesthetic. In his early '30's, he has amassed a million.

Gloria Vanderbilt gave a gallant tra la la to spring at a recent first night. Her evening cape was entirely of artificial violets. Incidentally, florists report the eclipse of the orchid, once the ace of corsages.

It became too much the symbol of the chorus girl and the crepe de Chine charmer and has been supplanted by a bunch of white violets centered with a spray of gardenias.

The surprise seller of the book trade continues to be Alexander Woollcott's "When Rome Burns." It has led the non-fiction list for more than a year in every state in the Union. Most of the material had appeared in widely circulated magazines.

Critics did not hail it with especial roof top yoo-hoos. Those who profess to know say a certain popularity he attained on the radio did the trick. Curiosity buyers.

The most auspicious of after-theater merriments are Major Bowes' midnight buffets in his art laden apartment over the Capitol Theater. The host's celebrity cornucopia shakes out a mince pudding miscellany of the stage, radio, screen and opera.

The Major invites them, spreads a larrupin' feast and lets nature take its course. On one divan Ponselle and Tibbett may be in animated palaver with Col. Stoopnagle and Bud. On another David Warfield and Joe Weber revive Tony Pastor nights.

On still another Gracie Allen astonishes two other Gracies—Moore and George—with intelligent flashes so varied from her dumbbell routine.

In the long, picture-lined halls Rube Goldberg loiters before original Whistlers, Van Goghs and Rembrandts. George Gershwin in one of the lost rooms is running through old tunes. Somewhere James Melton is singing a song. And Grantland Rice is making poetry speak as it should.

The younger generation seems no longer moonstruck. They do not pair off in the conventional twosome. Libby Holman is invariably squired to the cafes and supper clubs by a sophomoric crowd of from four to eight.

Tallulah Bankhead carries her courtiers in half dozen lots while they clot about her in enraptured ga-ga. The debutante, Adelaide Moffet, too, always bounds in with a cluster that suggests New Haven in the mood of caper.

Ted Saucier tells of a radio singer giving a luncheon at the Waldorf for 18 college boy friends. At Larue's the other evening a vibrant blonde in her teens was traipsed to a table by seven jerkins who seemed mostly teeth and knuckles. She paid the check, too, and tipped the hat boy.

And the check, take it from an efficient old squinter, was a honey. To be exact, $41.90. And that's a crowd of money.

There's something appealing about Gilbert Seldes' farewell to radio. Try as he would, he could not reach the studio in time. Several nights a week he was from 5 to 10 minutes late, arriving breathless, while a harried pianist glossed over the gap with improvisations.

Seldes has been a free lance, never knuckling to rote. After a few weeks he cried: "T'ell with it!" And flounced out, bless him.

I once tuned up to quit a city editorship for an overbearing managing editor. Storming into his office, I opened my mouth, but no words came.

Finally the blond ogre glanced up and inquired: "Want something?" I shook my head and stumbled back to the mines.

Gambling of Today
Human Side of the News
By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Charles M. Schwab stops off in Monte Carlo to take what he calls "the Casino cure."

His doctors tell the old steelmaster that a whirl or two at the tables is a tonic, perhaps not unlike the waters of Vichy or Carlsbad.

Edwin C. Hill

Back home here, however, Drs. Farley and La Guardia find little that is curative in the gentle art of gambling.

On the contrary, the Postmaster General believes that foreign lottery tickets have a very sickening effect upon American pocketbooks, while the Mayor of New York with his police commissioner, the grand jury and the district attorney are performing an operation upon the "policy racket."

LEGAL IN IRELAND

The Postoffice Department's guns are trained on the sweepstakes operated in connection with horse races in England and Canada.

About $5,000,000 of American money went into the purchase of shares in these sweeps last year.

And according to official reckoning, $3,000,000 of this was real "sucker" money paid out for counterfeit tickets.

Most of the other $2,000,000 found its way to Ireland, where the sweeps are legalized and operated for the benefit of hopitals.

Hereafter it is going to be a tough job distributing the tickets in the United States because Mr Farley's minions are watching the borders, the ports of entry and the mails.

In the past few months they have picked up $250,000 of the tickets and they expect that this year they will cut that $5,000,000 total at least in half.

New York's policy game is a penny ante affair and particularly vicious because its pennies come from the poorest of homes and because it is operated by the gangster elements.

MONTE CARLO WIZARD

Coincident with Mr. Schwab's visit and with the war on gambling in this country comes a book, "The Wizard of Monte Carlo," written by Count Corti and published by Duttons. In it Count Corti traces from the beginning the history of this most famous House of Chance that the world has known.

An obscure French gambler, Edmond Blanc, was the wizard of Monte Carlo. Casting about for a place where the rich might gamble in luxurious surroundings, he first hit upon Homburg, a bankrupt town whose landgrave was seeking any means of making money.

He made it and Blanc made it because Homburg became the magnet which drew the gamblers of the world, especially the Russians, with their endless millions of francs sweated out of endless millions of people.

The ascendancy of Prussia spelled the end of Homburg and it was closed in 1869. But the wily Blanc had been preparing against such a day and when the blow fell he was set up already in Monaco, ready for business on the grandest scale.

Monte Carlo isn't what it used to be. The war and the toppling of monarchies has had a lot to do with the change.

The palace-like Casino no longer is the rendezvous of dukes, duchesses, princes and plotters. It is filled usually with ordinary tourists who crowd about the tables and bet their dimes and dollars on the numbers 1 to 36 in red and black.

No more do we hear of spectacular play such as the little swindler Charles Welles put on in 1891 when in one day he broke the bank twelve times to become "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo."

Even in the more exclusive Sporting Club, the stakes don't even approach comparison with the play I have seen at Bradley's in our own Palm Beach.

The cemetery still remains at Monte Carlo, and the Casino people still have a terrific dread of suicides, but these are few and far between.

2 Billions a Year Wasted
B, JAMES T. WILLIAMS

Approximately two thousand million dollars of the hard earned money of the American people is being wasted every year by political parasites on the payrolls of state, county and local government throughout the United States.

Experts estimate that 25 per cent of all of the money collected by government in taxes levied upon the people is totally wasted every 12 months.

Surveys made by experts reveal that reforms in county and local governments in the several states would eliminate most of this waste.

This elimination would make it possible to reduce the general property tax to its 1912 level and still leave millions of dollars available to be spent by the states on public education and other useful and essential public services.

The property tax per dollar of assessed valuations has increased in this country 25 per cent in the last twenty years.

This increase will continue and the tax burden of the people will grow in size unless the people themselves drive from power most of the politicians now in the legislatures of the several States and replace them with public servants pledged to lift the yoke of ox-cart government from the necks of the people.

This can only be done by modernizing the whole system of State, county and local government, North, South, East and West.

President Roosevelt while he was Governor of New York vigorously denounced this obsolete system of government. He declared it to be an inheritance from the days of the ox-cart and therefore utterly unsuited to the needs of the automobile and airplane age.

Since that time the State of Nebraska under the leadership of Senator Norris has instituted a real reform in its government. The constitution of that state was amended at the last election so as to provide for a State Legislature of only one house. This experiment will be watched with interest throughout the country.

It is not necessary, however, to wait until all state legislatures have been thus reduced in order to reorganize and purge the present obsolete system of county and local governments. In most states the legislatures have the power to consolidate the county and other local government units.

In all states they have the power to abolish the iniquitous fee system, which still survives in many states.

A Lesson in Loyalty
By WINIFRED BLACK

Francis McMahon was knocked down and hurt ten years ago.

His skull was fractured, they found at the hospital. His dog, a Scotch collie, followed the stretcher which carried him up the steps.

Winifred Black

The dog's master put out his hand and patted the dog's head and said, "Wait here for me, Sandy," and the dog waited.

But his master never came out of that door again. He died in the hospital that very day.

But Sandy didn't know that. He just knew that his master told him to wait and so he waited. Summer came, and winter, spring and fall waxed and waned.

From the steps of the hospital Sandy watched the rising of the moon and the setting of the sun.

The hospital nurses fed him and gave him water.

At first, he would not eat or drink, but, after some days he kept himself from starving and now he has been there watching and waiting for ten years.

He isn't as strong or as lively as he was when his master patted his head and said, "Wait here, Sandy." But his eyes are still clear and never a step comes down that corridor that he does not raise his head and cock his ears to listen.

Sometimes they say he gives a sort of sigh when the footsteps pass him and he knows they are not the steps of his master.

Everyone around the hospital knows Sandy now, and he is friendly enough to the regular attendants, but he always growls at strangers, and sometimes he gets up and looks anxiously into the door of the corridor as if he wanted to say:

"Where are you, master, why do you keep me waiting so long?"

Ten years the dog has waited. Ten long, lonely years when he could have played and romped and barked like the other dogs—how foolish he is, to be sure.

But oh, what would you give for a friend like that! A human being who would never forget you, no matter how tired and how ill and lonely you were.

He's just a dog, we say—what a foolish way to speak.

He is a dog, that's the way we should put it, and when we say it we should mean he is brave and loyal and patient, and that's why we love and trust him.

Isn't It So?

No struggle was ever won on the platform of "I Can't."

Our lives should not be ruled too much by the opinions of others.

You should take life as you find it, but not leave it so.

Your mental attitude today may determine your success tomorrow.

Troubles are often mists to be dissolved when you throw new light upon them.
